ELEVATED INQUIRY DEMANDED

"1—Is the Elevated giving the people what they are paying for?

"2—Is it true that the nickels paid in by the public are sufficiently numerous to provide more adequate accommodations and transportation than is furnished at present?

"3—Is the Elevated obeying the law?

"4—Has it lived up to its promises and agreements?

"5—Has it paid over to the State that portion of its earnings it is bound by its charter to pay?"

Thomas A. Nyland, petitioner for legislation providing for an investigation of the Elevated company by a commission of three appointed by the Governor, prefaced a red-hot speech in favor of his bill before the Committee on Street Railways to-day with the foregoing questions.

"Such an investigation is not unprecedented," he said, "and the Legislature has the right to know all of this corporation's business. The New York Legislature ordered and conducted the investigation of the insurance companies which resulted in great good to the companies, as well as to the stockholders and the general public. The Elevated is a quasi public corporation doing business on the public streets. It has no rights but those granted to it by the from this corporation is only paralleled in drawn if sufficient reason can be shown.

"The attitude of begging for rights the creator seeking privileges from the Creator seeking privileges from the created. The public wants decent, safe, comfortable and rapid transportation, and after getting that they want from the money left over that share of the profits that this corporation has agreed to pay into the State treasury. The company is asking for new and valuable privileges, and now is the time to call upon it to render an account of its past stewardship.

"This bill calls for an investigation by three impartial, unprejudiced and disinterested citizens. It is absolutely necessary for an intelligent consideration of the company's request and resources. Without an investigation the Legislature will be groping in the dark. This bill provides a searchlight."

Joseph B. Eastman, secretary of the Public Franchise League, said the League is emphatically in favor of a thorough and public investigation of the Elevated's finances."

"For some time past the Elevated has pleaded poverty. It wishes the rental on subways reduced to a minimum; it does not wish to give transfers at Massachusetts and Huntington avenues," he said. "The people are entitled to know how much the Elevated is making, whether its profits are being wasted, how much it ought to make, how much it can afford to do."

DR. JOSEPH E. DWYER HURT IN RUNAWAY

Dr. Joseph E. Dwyer of No. 878 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, past exalted ruler of the Cambridge Lodge of Elks, injured in a runaway accident in the vicinity of the Cambridge City Hall to-day. His horse shied at a piece of paper and pranced about in such a manner that he tipped over the carriage, throwing Dr. Dwyer into the street. The horse dashed down Massachusetts avenue, stopping in front of Dr. Dwyer's home. Dr. Dwyer suffered a number of body bruises.

BALLOONISTS GOING OVER ARKANSAS

HOT SPRINGS, Arkansas, April 11.—The balloon carrying H. E. Honeywell and J. W. Lollman and which started from San Antonio last night passed over this city at 9:45 a. m. to-day. It was traveling north rapidly.

LASELL GIRLS CALL UPON THE PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, April 11.—President Taft to-day was to receive a party of girl students from Lasell Seminary near Boston. These students made an appointment at the White House for the reception by the executive.

UNCLE SAM SAYS FAIR WEATHER IN BOSTON TO-MORROW

WASHINGTON, April 11.—"Fair weather in Boston to-morrow" was the prediction made by the United States Weather Bureau this afternoon.

For the first time in its history the bureau issued a special baseball weather forecast for the opening of the National and American League seasons to-morrow and, remarkable to relate, Boston and New York seem to be the only cities that are booked for a good day.

Showers are due in St. Louis, Washington, Chicago, Detroit, Philadelphia and Cincinnati. It is a gloomy outlook for fans, especially in Cincinnati and Detroit, where heavy rains are expected to-night which may last 24 hours.

CLERGY FAVORS ASYLUM BILL

The legislative Committee on Public Charitable Institutions gave a hearing to-day at the State House on the bill offered by Dr. L. Vernon Briggs to prohibit all forms of restraint in the hospitals, sanatoriums and other institutions in the State, where insane patients are confined, thus putting an end to cruelties which have recently come to light.

The hearing was scheduled for Room 440, the attendance was so large that it was adjourned to Room 436. Dr. Briggs spoke first before the committee. He read the bill offered. It provided that no form of restraint should be used except in violent cases, and then either in the presence of the resident physician or on his written order.

"Scotland has abolished all forms of restraint in its institutions," said the doctor. "States in our Union have also done so, and we should do so here."

Clergymen Favor Bill.

The Rev. Alexander Mann, pastor of Trinity Church, spoke in favor of the bill. Dr. Elwood Worcester, of the Emmanuel Church, said: "I have no exact fault to find with the institution in our State, but I feel that this bill provides a protection for the inmates of them. I believe that moral influences should be used in preference to physical restraint."

Monsignor Splaine, appearing as the personal representative of Archbishop O'Connell said: "The Archbishop wishes to have it known that he is in favor of any and all legislation for the benefit of the inmates of our insane hospitals."

Dr. Albert Evans declared that reasonable methods gained better results always. He told of an experience of his own to illustrate his point. He said:

"I was at the Back Bay station with a patient and two men nurses. The patient ran away. The nurses grabbed his coat. I told them to let him go. We followed. He stopped in front of a flower stand. I said, 'What were you going to do, buy some flowers.'

Yes, He Bought Flowers.

"'By George, I was,' he replied. He then purchased some flowers and returned with us."

The Rev. William H. van Allen said: "I have visited many of the institutions in the State and from what I have seen there believe this bill ought to pass."

Dr. Henry R. Steadman, chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Taunton Insane Hospital, opposed the bill. He said:

"I protest against the passage of this bill because there are no circumstances to warrant its passage. There are no such cases of restraint as this bill seeks to prevent."

Dr. Steadman admitted that he conducted a private insane hospital of his own. He was asked if he had experts from other institutions examine his patients and he said no. Senator Hancock said he thought outside experts should be called in and as an illustration of his point said:

"I know of a woman who was thought to be incurable at the Taunton hospital. She was sent to Danvers as incurable. I got her out and she is now on the Cape in perfect health."

Restraint in Private Asylums.

Dr. Steadman said there were but two cases of restraint at Taunton now. He told of a man who was kept in a suit laced at the back because he wanted to undress himself all the time, and of a woman who had her hands in long sleeves because of a maniacal frenzy. He admitted that restraint was more prevalent in private than in public institutions.

Representative Quinn of Lynn asked permission to ask Dr. Steadman a question at this point.

"You can't ask the doctor anything now, Representative, you know that you can't," said Senator Turner.

"I think I have the right," said Quinn.

"You can't ask him any questions until the committee is through asking questions," retorted Senator Turner.

The committee was through at this point and Representative Quinn asked:

"Is punching and kicking called restraint?" The doctor answered:

GET INJUNCTION IN MAIL CLERK'S CASE

Judge Dodge in the United States Circuit Court to-day issued an order restraining the First Division Railway Mail Association from preventing Charles H. Quackenbush running as a candidate against A. C. Walton for the presidency of the organization. Quackenbush has been dropped as a government employe in the railway mail service, but remains in the fight for the head of the association. The meeting for the election of president and other officers takes place to-day at No. 446 Tremont street. Counsel representing Quackenbush brought the matter before Judge Dodge.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, April 11.—With a big crowd and a fair day the baseball season in Boston opened this afternoon, the Red Sox Colts, fresh from their long trip to California, lining up against the Harvard team.

The Colts, a bit worn from the last lap of their journey—the long run from Chicago here—arrived at the grounds at 2 o'clock. They had been in Boston but two hours and were tired, but happy. Bill Carrigan headed the squad that ran on to the diamond for the warming-up practice and they were all roundly cheered.

Janvrin, the Boston schoolboy third baseman, came in for special attention from the crowd, which included scores of youngsters from the Boston high schools. Tris Speaker, who has been sick, was also applauded. The new men were looked upon with great interest. A large delegation of Harvard students were in the grand stand.

RED SOX COLTS IN BOSTON FOR THE FIRST GAME

The Red Sox Colt squad, headed by Manager Patsy Donovan and Treasurer Hugh McBreen, reached Boston at noon to-day to open the baseball season in the game with Harvard at the Huntington Avenue Grounds this afternoon.

All but the manager and Mrs. Donovan got off the train at the Huntington avenue station. Mr. and Mrs. Donovan went through to South Station and thus escaped a welcome from the small group of faithful fans, who welcomed the first comers from the great "Coast-to-Coast" baseball tour.

Tris Speaker, looking somewhat pale and wan, was on hand to greet his fellows. The Yanigans were quick to inquire about his health and were cheered by his telling them that he felt fit to get into the hardest kind of a battle to-morrow. The crowd was lined up while pictures were taken and then everyone hurried away to find something edible.

Treasurer McBreen, said the players were in much better condition than he expected them to be a month ago. The arrivals from the Coast looked fit, even Billy Purtell, who is suffering with a sore arm, appearing to be in the best of health. Manager Donovan gave orders for the team to report at the Huntington avenue grounds at 2 o'clock for practice before the exhibition game with Harvard. The athletes would have been pleased if this had been an off day in the schedule, for they were weary after their long travels.

Five Pitchers Are All Right.

"We are in fairly good shape," said Manager Pat, "but no better than I'd like to have us. There are five pitchers who can go the full route, and that is a comfort in itself. Frank Smith isn't anywhere near his best, and some of the other regulars have slight ailments, but I hope to see everybody fit in a few days.

"I'm glad Speaker has recovered from his illness, for you may be sure we need him. We want the whole team in shape to give Washington a beating in the first series, and I will be surprised and disappointed if we don't get away to a good start."

No one among the Yanigans denied that the trip had been a tedious one, but no one seemed sorry to have taken it. The sun was shining brightly when the men got off the train, and this had the effect of cheering the party, which had expected to find snow in Boston. Treasurer McBreen said the second team would be busy filling dates with New England League and other clubs the balance of the week.

Great Sale of Tickets.

A despatch from Washington this afternoon said: "All records for advance sale of baseball tickets in Washington were broken to-day. Within half an hour after the first box had been sold every special reservation for the opening game at the National Park to-morrow had been disposed of. Walter Johnson, the premier pitcher of the American League and the prize beauty of Jimmy McAleer's Nationals will pitch the opening game to-morrow against the Boston Red Sox. The grand

MAN TRIES TWICE TO DROWN HIMSELF

Thomas S. O'Hearn, twenty-seven, of South Boston, made two unsuccessful attempts to drown himself in the harbor early to-day. He jumped into the water from Long wharf and was rescued by two of the crew of the fishing schooner "Pontiac." He was landed at T wharf and a few minutes later made another attempt to end his life but was prevented by his rescuers.

Physicians at the Relief Hospital were unable to get any explanation from him.

LYNN, April 11.—Fred Tenney's bunch of Rustler colts, a live looking aggregation of ball players, came to Lynn this afternoon in charge of Billy Hamilton to play the Lynn New England League team. A large crowd were at the Lynn park to see the first big game of the season.

The Lynn bunch was in good form for the opener, and Tenney's "second" bunch looked as good as the first team of Boston Nationals appeared last season. It was a formidable looking aggregation for a set of Colts.

OFFER CHECK BOOKS AT BROKERS' TRIAL

Two checks books and a number of monthly envelopes showing overdrafts were introduced during the Sederquist-Barry trial to-day. The two check books were of the Beacon Trust Company. Witness Elmer E. George testified that one was for the regular business of the firm and the other was used to pay to the trust company sums demanded on the firm account. He said no record of these checks to the trust company was kept on the Sederquist & Barry books. The envelopes were monthly statements of the condition of the firm's account with the American Trust Company. Twelve envelopes were introduced, and it was shown that for eleven of the months there was an overdraft against the Sederquist-Barry account in the neighborhood of $35,000. On one occasion there was a balance of $8,420 in the firm's favor.

LYNN SHOE CUTTERS GO OUT ON STRIKE

Fifteen cutters employed in the Hoag & Walden shoe factory on Commercial street, Lynn, struck to-day for one-fourth of a cent more per pair for cutting a certain high-top shoe made by the concern. There will be a conference between a union committee and the firm. A speedy settlement is expected. The seventy lasters who have been out for a week from the A. E. Little factory have not been able to get their demands granted and if the strike should last a week longer the plant may close down which would render from 1,000 to 1,400 hands idle. This concern is making some special shoes for members of the British nobility to wear at the coronation of King George. London shoe dealers are much worried over this Lynn strike and have been urging a settlement by cable.

MRS. LAWRENCE LOSES BIG COURT CONTEST

FAIRFIELD, Ct., April 11.—Mrs. Julia Watt Curtis Lawrence, heiress to the $10,000,000 Pinckney estate, lost her fight to-day for the removal of a conservator of the estate. Judge Hobbs denied her application and adjudged her incompetent to manage her affairs. He also decided she was in contempt of court. Mrs. Lawrence is the wife of Dr. G. A. Lawrence of No. 675 Madison avenue, New York, whom she married in Wilmington, Del., last February. Judge Hobbs' decision that Mrs. Lawrence is in contempt bars her from visiting her magnificent country place, Saco Point, for fear of arrest.

WOMEN'S ASSAILANT TO THE STATE FARM

Wislon Pson was sentenced to the State Farm by Judge Lummus in the Lynn Police Court to-day when Patrolman John Kane testified how he had attacked women on Church street yesterday. The policeman said that Pson, who was drunk, struck and kissed Mrs. Annie Hart of No. 59 Church street.

SAM LOYD, SR., IS DEAD, AGED SEVENTY

NEW YORK, April 11.—Sam Loyd, Sr., who accumulated a fortune of over a million dollars with his puzzles, died of apoplexy to-day at his home in Brooklyn. He was seventy years old.

YALE FIELD, New Haven, April 11.—A large gathering was on hand when the umpire yelled the word that inaugurated the baseball season here today. The Boston Rustlers and the Yale 'varsity nine was the attraction and it was a great day. The crowd turned out early to take in the preliminary practice and each of the teams were cheered lustily for the clever plays while warming up.

Manager Tenney had a long line of pitchers warming up for some time before the game was scheduled to start. He stood back of Parson, watching his benders, and he looked good to start the battle. The Yale team was not so fortunate in having so many mound men to warm up, but the three or four they had were watched as much as the big leaguers. Freeman was picked to start the game.

FIGHT TO ALTER CITY CHARTER ON TO-DAY

The re-establishment of party designations in this city and the enlargement of the City Council from nine to twenty-seven members is before the House to-day.

The minority bill reported by the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs had the endorsement of the executive committee of the Republican City Committee and the backing of Chairman Joseph A. Maynard of the Democratic City Committee, as well as that of other city and State leaders. There will be opposition, however, from many of the party men in the Legislature. Speaker Walker has declared his opposition to the legislation and he pointed out that since the Republican party is responsible for present conditions in Boston it would be unwise to amend the charter.

FIREMEN OVERCOME SAVING 100 GIRLS

NEW YORK, April 11.—Two alarms were sounded at noon for a fire in the factory of Charles J. Tagliabue Manufacturing Company at No. 2,020 Pacific street, Brooklyn. The blaze burned fiercely for an hour. Twenty firemen were overcome by the smoke before they succeeded in rescuing 100 men and girls employed in the plant, which manufactures thermometers. Flames blocked the inner stairways and the employes were taken down an iron stairway on the outside of the building. The loss is $25,000.

AMERICANS LEAD ATTACK BY REBELS

EL PASO, Tex., April 11.—Mexican federals, marching to the relief of Arizpe, encountered a band of insurrectos led by an American and containing half a dozen other Americans in the ranks about twenty-one miles from Cananea and in the battle which followed fifteen of the rebels were killed, many prisoners were taken and a large quantity of ammunition seized. A messenger from the south brought news of the battle here to-day.

CURLEY WELL AGAIN AFTER 13 OPERATIONS

Congressman James M. Curley, who is also a member of the City Council, is declared cured of the ailment which has been bothering him since he defeated Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell for renomination and election last Fall. Mr. Curley underwent thirteen operations and recently returned from Washington to reenter the hospital for another examination and possible operation, which the surgeons say is unnecessary.

CARNEGIE LIBRARY WON BY BROCKTON

BROCKTON, April 11.—Brockton is to have a Carnegie built library. Mayor Harry C. Howard to-day received a communication from James Bertram, private secretary to the millionaire, saying that Mr. Carnegie had decided to give Brockton $110,000. He made a previous gift of $75,000, but it was found that this would not be sufficient, and a committee of Brockton citizens visited Mr. Carnegie, and urged an increase in the sum.

ASSESSORS ACCUSED AT BIG HEARING

Banking Houses Declared to Have Been Especially Favored—Report Quoted.

Ex-Councilman Frank A. Goodwin attacked the Boston city assessors sharply at a hearing given by the assessors this afternoon to anyone who wished to be heard. Mr. Goodwin assailed the assessors on the ground that they had grossly undervalued downtown properties. He cited a list of properties in which he said that the undervaluations had caused losses to the city of thousands of dollars.

Mr. Goodwin criticised the assessment made on properties held by ex-Mayor Nathan Matthews Jr. A representative of Mr. Matthews declared that the latter had not received any undervaluation.

Representative of heavy mercantile taxpayers, such as A. Shuman, John Shepard and other downtown property owners and merchants, protested against the high valuation assessed upon their holdings.

The hearing took place in the Aldermanic chamber. Assessments of big Boston banking houses were declared below proper valuation by A. Prussian, a Roxbury accountant, and by others.

The chamber was thronged. There was much excitement. The board gave the hearing to give everybody interested a chance to make charges or complaints. John J. Murphy, chairman of the board, presided, and all the principal assessors were present.

Quotes Published Report.

In making the accusation that big banking houses are not taxed up to full valuation, Mr. Prussian said that on April 1, 1910, Hayden & Stone were assessed for $1,000,000 personal property, but that according to the Boston News Bureau report of April 19 that year, they had 1,380 shares of United States Steel preferred and 35,716 shares of common.

Blake Brothers, he said, were assessed at that time for $350,000 personal property, but that the same report showed they held 3,500 shares of United States Steel preferred and 10,400 common. He said that when R. L. Day & Co. were assessed for $[illegible] personal, the report stated they held 8,070 United States Steel preferred and 10,715 common.

The personal assessment upon Hornblower and Weeks, he said, was for $700,000 and they held 2,000 shares United States Steel preferred and 12,000 shares common.

He said that Kidder, Peabody & Co. and Lee, Higginson & Co., were assessed but for little more than their steel stock holdings.

Principal Assessor Edward B. Daily, speaking for the board said it should be taken into consideration that all the stocks carried by these banking houses are not taxable. He said it might be simply a case of nominal ownership and that certificates might be in the safes of customers. He stated, however, that these concerns were liable to be taxed on stocks carried on margin.

Mr. Prussian's contention was that if these stocks were in the actual possession of the banking concerns on April 1 they should be taxed.

Goodwin Renews Attacks.

Former Councilman Frank A. Goodwin renewed attacks upon the board for its assessment of Nathan Matthews's property and made new charges. In citing new cases for criticism he said that Mr. Matthews owned fifteen parcels of land on Dundee street which were assessed for only $63,000, although mortgaged to the Massa

EARTHQUAKE SHAKES ROMAN CAMPAGNA

ROME, April 11.—Two earthquakes were felt here yesterday. The first occurred early and the second about noon. Some slight alarm was caused in the city, but in the prison there was considerable panic and the prisoners made two separate attempts at mutiny. In the villages surrounding Rome the shocks were severe. In the various districts in Sicily last night loud rumblings were heard. A sudden flash of light was also observed and an electrical condition of the atmosphere. No earth shocks were recorded, and it is believed that the disturbance was caused by the falling of a ball of fire.

THIEVES BLAMED FOR $30,000 FIRE

Thieves or tramps are believed by the police to be responsible for the blaze which destroyed the auxiliary car barn of the Boston & Northern Street Railway Company on Ocean avenue, Revere Beach, early to-day. Two alarms were turned in but the structure, eight open cars and several snowplows were doomed before the firemen could get to the place. The loss is about $30,000.

CONSPIRATOR STARTS A RIOT

VITERBO, April 11.—The presence of Giacomo Ascrittore upon the witness stand to-day to continue his direct examination was the signal for another turbulent session of the Assize Court. Frequently the cries and curses and recriminations hurled between the witness chair and the steel cage containing Enrico Alfano and his associate Camorrists balked the efforts of Presiding Judge Bianchi and Carbineers to restore order.

At the opening of court President Bianchi announced that a recess for the Easter season would be taken after to-day's sitting. The trial will be resumed next week.

Ascrittore, who is accused of being in league with the priest, Father Vittozzi, to place the guilt of the murders of Gennaro Cuocolo and his wife Maria upon Tomasso DeAngelis and Gaetano Amedeo, and thus exonerate Alfano, Professore Rapi and Gennaro di Belli, had no sooner taken the stand than he again denounced Amedeo in most vigorous terms.

Amedeo, still hoarse from his screaming of yesterday, replied in kind. President Bianchi in vain called for order and the uproar had to be quited finally by several carbineers.

The other prisoners took a hand in the tumult with the exception of Gennaro Abatemaggio, the betrayer of the Camorra, who coolly looked on, seemingly enjoying the scene.

ASCRITTORE HA VIOLENTI RISPOSTE: VACANZE PASQUALI

VITERBO, 11 Aprile.—Oggi, colla ripresa dell'interrogatorio di Giacomo Ascrittore, abbiamo avuto un'altra sessione turbolenta. Le grida e le maledizioni, le urla di recriminazione scambiate fra l'interrogato e gli altri prigionieri, dal capo Alfano agli altri trentotto correi, han sopraffatto gli sforzi del Presidente Bianchi e dei carabinieri, tendenti a ristabilire l'ordine.

Stamane, appena si aprì la Corte, il Presidente Bianchi ha annunziato che in questa settimana di Pasqua non ci saranno udienze, e che la causa sara' ripresa l'entrante settimana.

Ascrittore, che unitamente al prete Vittozzi, affermando l'innocenza di Alfano, del prof. Rapi e di Gennaro Belli, accusa Tommaso De Angelis e Gaetano Amedeo, quali gli autori dell'assassinio di Gennaro Cuocolo e della moglie di costui, la "bellissima Sorrentina"—Ascrittore ha oggi, ancora una volta, affermata la sua accusa con grande vigore.

Amedeo, oggi come ieri, ancora rauco delle violenti risposte fatte, ha replicato asprissimo contro l'Ascrittore. Il presidente Bianchi, appellando invano per rimetter l'ordine, ha dovuto richieder l'opera dei carabinieri per far quietare gli interruttori.

Tutti i prigionieri han preso parte al tumulto, eccezione fatta di Abatemaggio, del traditore della Camorra, il quale, freddamente guardando, ha mostrato di compiacersene e di goderne.

CALLS NATIONAL BANK SAVINGS PLAN FRAUD

Henry Parkman, treasurer of the Provident Institution for Savings, told the legislative Committee on Taxation to-day that "the savings departments in national banks are frauds." Mr. Parkman opposed a bill to cut the tax on savings deposits in national banks from the local rate, averaging about $17.50 to $5 on $1,000. The bill would put the savings departments of national banks on an equal footing with bona fide savings banks. It was favored by Representatives Charles A. Dean of Wakefield and Henry G. Wells of Haverhill.

GOVERNOR FOSS'S SON IS ENGAGED

Benjamin Sturtevant Foss, eldest son of Governor E. N. Foss, is to be married to Miss Dorothy Chapman, daughter of Mr. and Mr. Wilfred B. Chapman of San Francisco. The announcement came from the Golden Gate city. Mrs. Foss has verified the fact and said the news had been sent to her by wire from San Francisco, where her son and his intended bride are. The bride-to-be is a leading society girl.

SMOOTH CHIN IS SIGN OF BIRTHDAY

NEW HAVEN, Ct., April 11.—When the friends of Edward Lewis, one of the well known characters of Stratford, a New Haven suburb, saw him to-day they realized that it was his birthday, for he had had a shave. Mr. Lewis does not believe in shaving as a general rule. Each birthday, however, he gets a fine, fresh shave and hair cut, and to-day, as for many years past, he celebrated.

FORBID BOYS AS NIGHT MESSENGERS

The House of Representatives, by a voice vote, to-day passed to be engrossed a bill prohibiting the employment of boys under twenty-one years of age as messengers for telephone, telegraph or messenger companies between the hours of 10 p. m. and 5 a. m. An amendment to limit the age to 18 was defeated on a voice vote.

W. R. HEARST PRAISES CHAMP CLARK, THE NEW DEMOCRATIC SPEAKER

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The Washington Post prints the following: "William R. Hearst, who has been powerful in the Democratic party for many years, both as editor of newspapers and leader of his party in numerous campaigns, has been in Washington several days. His visit followed the arrival of Governor Harmon and William J. Bryan, and Mr. Hearst has naturally learned much of recent political developments and has added to the political wisdom of other Democrats who have recognized and respected his ability for years.

Just prior to the conclusion of his stay in Washington Mr. Hearst was asked a few questions by the Post, beginning with:

What has brought about the present promising conditions in the Democratic party and what are the pitfalls ahead to be guarded against?

Gives Credit to Clark.

To this Mr. Hearst replied:

"The promising condition in the Democratic party has been brought about by the fact that the Democratic party, under the leadership of Champ Clark, has had the courage to be progressive and the intelligence to be sound in its democracy.

"It was Tilden, I think, who said that the Democratic party would succeed when it had the courage to be democratic. To this might properly be added when it also had the intelligence to be sound in its democracy.

"The Democratic party has had more bravery than brains in some of its recent campaigns. It has had no lack of foolhardy courage. It has thrown wisdom to the winds in heroic willingness to sacrifice itself for policies which were neither sound nor Democratic. It has alienated friends who wanted to be with it in support of true democratic doctrine, simply because those friends would not also subscribe to certain fads and fancies which happened to be the fetiches of a particular campaign, but which had no place in a permanent Democratic program.

The pitfalls that the Democratic party should guard against in the future are the pitfalls into which it has fallen in the past. The Democratic party in the past has oscillated between the one extreme of violent and visionary radicalism to the other extreme of disingenuous and dishonest conservatism.

Party Harmony at Last.

Under Mr. Clark the Democratic party has been consistently progressive in a reasonable and a rational way. This policy has united the factions. It has gratified all intelligent radicals and suffered all honest conservatism.

Mr. Clark is a natural leader of the Democracy. He is thoroughly democratic himself in his every thought and action. He has no pet fads and personal fancies to substitute for the recognized principles of sound Democracy. He is big and broad, physically and mentally. He is genial and generous in spirit. He is definite and determined in his insistence on the essentials of Democracy, not narrowly insistent upon unessentials.

His whole policy is like oil upon the long troubled Democratic waters. Calm and quiet prevail where formerly there were storm and stress. And in this calm the good ship Democracy make the first real progress it has made in years.

What is the purpose of your present visit to Washington? Are you here to advise the Democrats?

The purpose of my visit to Washington is to attend to my newspaper business and to the organization of the Washington bureau of my newspapers. I am going to New York to-morrow.

Too Many Advisers Now.

I am not here to advise the Democrats because I think they are getting along admirably without advice from outsiders; second, because I think they are likely to be somewhat over-advised by the legion of volunteer advisers already in Washington. When Democracy was in difficulty there was no particular advantage in posing as its professional adviser, and the place was not eagerly sought, but as soon as the Democracy is admittedly successful and evidently without the need of advice dozens of self-appointed advisers arise ,in various parts of the country and rush to Washington to get some credit for a popular course with which they had nothing whatever to do.

I would be very glad to advise the Democracy if the party needed advice and I were asked to advise it, but since the party is proceeding so soundly and successfully under the competent leadership of Mr. Clark I think the best thing that any Democrat can do who has no defined political position here in Washington is to go home and rally the citizens of his own State and section around the progressive Democratic banner which Mr. Clark has raised. That is what I have been doing in Chicago and what I am going to try to do in New York and on the Pacific Coast.

What is your definition of a progressive? What is the difference between a progressive Democrat and a progressive Republican, if any?

I stated my definition of a progressive a long time ago in my political campaign for the mayoralty of New York city. I am inclined to think that I was the first to substitute the word progressive for the word radical, which latter had been in general use up to that time. I said in one speech at Carnegie Hall, "I define a radical as a man who is anxious to get at the root of anything." But the term has been somewhat discredited by the extreme radicals who appear to be anxious to tear up the roots of everything. I define a progressive as a sound and judicious radical.

Sees Union of Progressives.

Extreme radicals have had their day. They have led their party up too many blind alleys of fantastic theory, only to be compelled to retrace their steps. Now let sound and wise progressives lead along the broad highways of political and economic progress upon what the advancing forces of civilization must inevitably march.

To my mind there is no difference between Republican progressives and Democrat progressives, except that the first hope to accomplish their object through the Republican party and the second hope to achieve their aims through the Democratic party. Should both fail in their efforts a new party, a progressive party composed of both Democrats and Republicans, will undoubtedly be formed.

FIRE TRAP SURVIVORS ACCUSE EMPLOYERS

NEW YORK, April 11.—Survivors of the Triangle Waist Company fire in statements made to the Italian consul during an independent investigation into the holocaust which cost 145 lives, have accused officials of the company of subordination of purjury in having forced them under threats, to sign false affidavits releasing their employers from all responsibility for the fire trap. Twenty-five affidavits were made, and almost every girl swore that the doors on the eighth and ninth floors were kept locked at all times.

TO-DAY'S CABLE NEWS
Up to Midnight London Time

Mme. Steinheil's Daughter Will Wed Russian Noble.

PARIS—Mlle. Marthe Steinheil is shortly to be married to a Russian artist now residing in Paris. The couple met at the villa Impasse Ronsin, which is rented by the Russian Art Society and where Mlle. Steinheil still occupies a single room. It is understood that the wedding will take place as soon as the necessary formalities in Russia have been concluded. Since her separation from her mother Mlle. Steinheil has earned a livelihood by fancy work, which she sold to fashionable shops. Marthe Steinheil is the daughter of Mme. Marguerite Steinheil, who was acquitted on November 14, 1909, of the murder of her husband, Adolphe Steinheil, an artist, and her stepmother, Mme. Japy.

Deadly Battle With Bandits.

BERLIN—The police of Rossberg, a town in Prussian Silesia, near Beuthen, have just given an example of handling desperadoes without the aid of the military. A murderer of the name of Kowoll escaped after killing a policeman who was trying to arrest him. He took refuge in a house with an accomplice and they were besieged by the police. A fight with revolvers followed and several policemen were wounded, but Kowoll and his companion were killed.

France May Open Bourse Doors.

PARIS—The question of listing foreign securities on the Paris Bourse came up in the Chamber of Deputies during the discussion of the finance budget. M. Caillaux, the Minister of Finance, declared that the present system of introducing bonds and other negotiable paper on the Bourse kept out first class securities. Deputy Bouge proposed substituting for the present system a fixed stamp tax of 2 per cent. on these securities with a 1 per cent. transfer tax.

Astor's Paper Predicts War.

LONDON—William Waldorf Astor's paper, the Pall Mall Gazette, in an editorial commenting on the latest arbitration news and the Carnegie speech, compares the talk of the English and American people to an ostrich hiding its head in the sand. It then continues: "Some of the United States possessions are unprotected, and every student of diplomacy knows that it might be forced to-morrow into a conflict almost hopeless from the beginning, and fraught with humiliation throughout."

$20 For Leighton's "Appeal."

LONDON—At Sotheby's auction rooms a copy of Dr. Alexander Leighton's "Appeal to Parliament," printed in 1628, realized $20. For publishing this book the author was sentenced by the Star Chamber to be twice publicly whipped, pilloried in Cheapside, his ears cut off, his nose twice slit, his cheeks branded with hot irons with the letters "S. S."—sower of sedition—to pay a fine of £30,000 ($150,000), and to imprisonment for life.

London to See "Oedipus."

LONDON—Reinhardt's production of the Sophocles tragedy, "Oedipus Rex," which is the reigning dramatic sensation of the Continent, will be given at Earls Court in June. It is a singular fact that this greatest Coronation spectacle, requiring 600 actors and a majestic stage setting, is made possible in London by German and American enterprise.

Women Seek Buried Treasure.

PANAMA—A party of six, four men and two women, of whom five are English, and one American, recently arrived here from England. It is reported that the women are in charge of the party, which sailed yesterday for Cocos Island, 500 miles from here, for the purpose of searching for buried treasure.

Prince Leopold Very Ill.

HONG KONG—Prince Leopold of Battenberg, brother of the Queen of Spain, who is seriously ill aboard the steamship Empire here and unable to disembark, will proceed to Japan to-day. Governor and Lady Lugard visited him on board the steamship.

Wendells Touring China.

SHANGHAI—J. Franklin Fort, one time Governor of New Jersey, and his family are en route to Japan, where Mr. Fort will be semi-officially received. Professor and Mrs. Barrett Wendell of Harvard are touring China.

Gen. Booth Is Eighty-two.

LONDON—General Booth, head of the Salvation Army, celebrated his eighty-second birthday by addressing a huge meeting of his followers for an hour. He said he hoped after his tour through the United States and Canada to have the cataract on his eye operated upon in the Fall.

Rome Orders Obedience.

LISBON—The Portuguese Bishops received a note from Cardinal Merry del Val, Papal Secretary of State, instructing them to accept the separation of Church and State without reserve.

CONTESTANTS JUST READ THIS

By THE CONTEST EDITOR.

Batter up!

The baseball season opens in New England to-morrow, barring rain, snow, earthquake or other frenzied weather.

Well, baseball is the Great American Game. But don't forget, you candidates, that the Great American Contest is the AMERICAN'S $35,000 Prize Contest.

What are you going to do during the remaining nine weeks or so of this Contest? Are you going to strike out or are you going to step up to the rubber and wait the willow for a homer? Are you going to sit on the bench or are you going to fatten up your average? Are you going to stay on the hay-and-grass circuit, or are you going to make the Big League, the Big Voting League?

"Wow! Let 'er go—goo, rah!—a hit!—a Hit!—what's that—out—he's safe—he's dead safe—kill the Contest Editor, I mean, kill the umpire!"

My word! but this baseball talk is the lingual goods. "Say, Boss, can I get away this afternoon, my grandmother's dead again?"

Baseball dope isn't so inappropriate to this contest at that. A home run is high line on the diamond. And, by the same token, the winner of the capital prize in this contest will score a home run, an $8,000 one. He will walk off with a house and two lots. That will be a bigger wallop than any Major League hitter will make this season, or any other.

The Contest Editor wishes to caution subscribers and candidates once more that changes of addresses, whether temporary or permanent, must be sent in promptly to the Contest Department. If a subscriber changes his address and stops taking the Sunday AMERICAN from his regular newsdealer, then the candidate to whom that subscription is credited is liable to lose the vote credit. Notify the Contest Department when you move and have the matter attended to.

Subscribers are also cautioned about taking the newsdealer's order and the return postcard to the newsdealer. The order is to be kept by the newsdealer. The return postcard is to be filled out and returned to the Contest Department.

Among the first fifty leaders in District Five, as shown by the new list of candidates' standing last Sunday, is Miss Esther M. Flinn of Nashua, N. H. She is in the sophomore class of Nashua High School and is conducting an active campaign.

FIRE ESCAPES BILL REPORTED

The Rules Committee of the House of Representatives to-day reported "ought to be admitted" on a bill requiring outside fire escapes on all factories, workshops and mercantile establishments where ten or more persons are employed. The bill was filed by Representative Scully of Springfield following the recent Triangle Waist factory fire in New York.

The same report was made on a bill permitting cities and towns in the Metropolitan district to bond their indebtedness resulting from the Charles River basin improvement so that the payments may be spread over a term of years instead of being paid at once. A bill authorizing the Concord water commissioners to make an additional water loan was also approved by the committee.

The committee was evenly divided, 5 to 5, on the Halgis bills limiting the legislative session to 100 days and providing that all legal holidays shall be observed on the Monday of the week in which each occurs. Reference to the next General Court was recommended on these two bills.

The four measures were discussed before the Rules Committee to-day on the question of their being admitted for discussion at this session of the Legislature. They were filed after the usual filing time had closed. The report of the Rules Committee is not final, a four-fifths vote in each branch being necessary to admit late bills. The committee's report is usually worth votes one way or another, however.

STRIKERS MAY TIE UP BIG SHOE PLANT

Encouraged by the action of the 200 edge makers and lasters, Local No. 16 of the United Shoe Workers' Union, in voting "not to handle any unfair work" at the Heard street factory of the Walton Shoe Company, where they are employed, the striking stitchers of that concern, fifty women and 150 men, feel confident that there will be a complete tie-up of the plant within the next twenty-four hours. The tie-up will affect 1,400, many of them girls.

HUMANE DAY IN BOSTON SCHOOLS

More than 12,000 school teachers are to-day instructing hundreds of thousands of school children to love and to be kind to animals and birds. To-day is the fifth anniversary of "humane day," which was started in the Boston schools in 1906, the observance of which has since spread to all of the schools in the State. The programs vary according to the grade of the school. No definite program has been arranged for general observance.

This Prescription Knocks Rheumatism

The only logical treatment for rheumatism is through the blood. A prescription, which has recently proved wonderfully effective in hospital work, is the following. Any druggist has the ingredients or will quickly get them for you. Any one can mix them: "One ounce compound syrup of Sarsaparilla, one ounce Toris compound, half pint first-class whiskey." These to be mixed and used in tablespoon doses before each meal and at bedtime. This cured thousands here last winter. It relieves immediately.

Not only will it eradicate rheumatism quickly, but it is a splendid system builder and soon restores appetite and vitality. Many persons troubled with rheumatism would not be without a bottle of this mixture on hand at all times.

FOSS AWAITS PEOPLE'S CALL

Governor Foss ot-day made two statements of great interest in connection with his administration; one regarding a second term for himself and the other as to the next police commissioner. He says that the people must show him whether they want him again for Governor, also that he has not made up his mind yet whom to appoint for the position held by Stephen O'Meara.

When asked if he would be a candidate for a second term, he said:

"You know this is an administration of the people, and it will depend greatly on whether or not the people call me."

This statement was of especial interest to the three Republican candidates for the office, Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham, Speaker Walker and Representative White. It is quite generally believed that Foss can beat any one of the trio.

It has been stated that the Governor felt that he could not spare another year away from his big business interests, but his statement indicates that he will run again if he thinks his administration has the endorsement of the people of the State.

On the question of the next police commissioner, Governor Foss says:

"This appointment vitally concerns the citizens of Boston, and I want to hear from as many citizens as are interested. I want to see that the position is filled by the very best man that can be obtained. My mind is absolutely free on the appointment to-day."

DEPORTED FOR FOURTH TIME

Thomas Rushforth, the English immigrant who has made repeated attempts to enter this country, was deported for the fourth time in three years when the White Star liner Cymric sailed from this port to-day. Rushforth declared before sailing that he would keep trying to enter.

Rushforth was deported from Providence three years ago after trying to commit suicide. He was then declared insane. Since then he has tried three times to enter the country.

The Cymric sailed to-day with twenty-five saloon passengers and 150 steerage. She had a large general cargo and in addition to this 550 head of cattle and 850 head of sheep.

WANT LICENSE FOR MEN'S SAKE

"The women members of the fashionable Chilton Club want a liquor license entirely on account of the men who may call or dine there. That's why they have applied for a license," declared Mrs. Wirt Dexter, chairman of the House Committee and one of the founders of the club, to-day.

"As a matter of fact," said Mrs. Dexter, "women very rarely drink!"

A protest has come from Mrs. Katherine L. Stevenson, president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Massachusetts, and many clergymen against the issuance of a license to the club. Mrs. Stevenson says that it "savors of a decadent womanhood." The Rev. O. P. Gifford says that a woman cannot remain a lady and allow liquor to be sold in her club.

There are 550 women in the Chilton Club and 150 more anxious to get in. Mrs. Dexter made it known that there was not a single vote against the license idea.

"A woman's club is just like her home," she said. "Is there anything so terrible in wishing to have a glass of wine served us if we desire it? We would have it in our own homes, why not here?

"I understand that the W. C. T. U. is agitating against us," continued Mrs. Dexter. "I have the greatest respect for that organization and have contributed to its support, but you know, to some of the women in it, a glass of sherry is—well, like a red rag to a bull. To us here in the club, there is nothing that could possibly be objected to. It's a perfectly natural occurrence in our lives."

"Do you really believe that there is any difference in the way people in society use liquor from those outside the pale?" was asked.

"I see that such statement was attributed to me," said Mrs. Dexter. "Of course, I never said any such thing. Drinking is a matter which concerns the individual. What I did say was that I've never seen a woman intoxicated. That's perfectly true, but, of course, I don't go anywhere where I'd be likely to see that."

"But if drinks are served here in unlimited——"

"Really," interrupted Mrs. Dexter, "you certainly don't expect to find any such thing here, do you? As a matter of fact men very rarely drink. It is far more customary at dinners to see the women's glasses turned down."

"Then why are your club members so anxious for the license?"

"Entirely on account of the men," replied Mrs. Dexter. "As you know, we entertain men here as guests and, of course, they naturally desire something to drink."

"Were there any members of the club who objected to the idea of a license?"

"None; there was not a single dissenting voice," declared Mrs. Dexter.

Cecelia May, Who Breaks Engagement

RELIGION ENDS MAY ROMANCE

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Irreconcilable differences in religious beliefs have shattered the romance of Miss Cecilia May, in exclusive social circles here, and Robert L. Bacon, Jr., son of the ambassador to France.

Announcement was made to-day that the engagement announced March 10 has been broken. Colonel Henry May, father of the young woman, made the announcement in a statement to the AMERICAN to-night. Colonel May said:

"Colonel and Mrs. Henry May broke the engagement of Miss May to Robert L. Bacon, Jr., because Mr. Bacon declined to make the promises required by the Roman Catholic Church in mixed marriages, Mr. Bacon being a Protestant.

"The binding promise exacted by the Roman Catholic Church in all mixed marriages which it sanctions is that all children resulting from the union shall be reared in the Roman Catholic faith."

Miss May Broke Engagement.

In making this statment Colonel May expressed the hope that this frank announcement would put an end to the various rumors in circulation in social circles about the broken engagement and in particular he wished it understood that Miss May and not Mr. Bacon broke the engagement for the reasons above stated.

Rumors have been in circulation through the day that Mr. Bacon had broken the engagement because his father had frowned on the match.

Society is pained and grieved over this tragic denouement to a romance which was coincident to the romance of Count Pourtales and Countess Von Bernstorff, daughter of the German ambassador, which culminated in the recent marriage in which Miss May was one of the happy bridesmaids.

The greatest amazement is expressed by society over the fact that matters had been allowed to progress so far without the question of religion having been adjusted.

An early wedding had been arranged for. Miss May and her parents being devout Catholics and desiring to have the ceremony performed during the recent visit of Ambassador and Mrs. Bacon to this country, a special dispensation was obtained from Cardinal Gibbons to have the wedding celebrated during the Lenten season.

The first hint of disagreement came then, the plan for an early wedding being suddenly abandoned and announcement made that the ceremony had been postponed until Autumn.

It is now learned that the postponement was due to the fact that Mr. Bacon, who is a stanch Protestant of Puritan stock, found himself unable to subscribe to the requirements of his prospective bride's faith.

Whether a family council was held at the time cannot be learned. But Ambassador and Mrs. Bacon returned to Paris, following which the rumor became prevalent that the engagement had been broken. Confirmation of this rumor came abruptly to-day.

Miss May Very Popular.

The engagement was made public on March 10, at a luncheon given by Colonel and Mrs. May to a large party of their daughter's friends, and society was looking forward to the event as one of the largest affairs of the season.

Miss May having been one of the bridesmaids at the Von Bernstorff-Pourtales wedding, it was thought that hers would be the next prominent marriage, and there were frequent merry suggestions to this effect among the wedding party which accompanied the Count and Countess to the altar.

Miss Cecilia May is one of the most popular younger girls in Washington. A graduate of Eden Hall, she traveled for several years in Europe before making her bow to Washington society at a brilliant ball. The May family has been famous for its many belles and like her elder sister, Miss Isabell, Miss Cecilia has been much sought by the eligible bachelors of Washington.

Mr. Bacon also is a member of an old and distinguished family. He was famous as stroke at Harvard in the class of 1907, and is now connected with the State Department. His father, Ambassador Bacon, once was Secretary of State. He belongs to several clubs and is prominent socially. Mr. Bacon has known Miss May for years and society had been expecting the announcement of their engagement long before it was.

Friend of Miss Taft.

Miss Cecilia May is a close friend of Miss Helen Taft and is one of the most beautiful girls in the Capital. Her elder sister, Miss Isabel May, was a member of the White House during the last administration, having been a chum of Miss Alice Roosevelt. The elder Miss May was as famous in Washington for her friendship with the President's daughter as she was for her luxuriant black hair and her imported hats.

Miss Cecilia May is a devotee of outdoor sports and gives her fancy full sway at the family Summer place at Southampton. It was at the Summer home that Mr. Bacon, himself an athlete, did most of his courting.

"TOM" JOHNSON TO LIE IN STATE

CLEVELAND, O., April 11.—All Cleveland is in mourning to-day for Tom L. Johnson, four times mayor and former Congressman from this district, who died last night after a lingering illness of cirrhosis of the liver. Public buildings are draped in black and flags are at half mast in honor of the man who had fought so hard for his three-cent street carfare principle here.

Many telegrams and cablegrams of condolence were received by the bereaved family to-day. When he was on his tour of England, Mr. Johnson created a favorable impression by his speeches and made many warm friends.

Mr. Johnson's remains will lie beside those of the man he admired most, Henry George, the great New York single taxer, in Greenwood cemetery in Brooklyn, N. Y. The Johnsons have a family plot in that cemetery.

A memorial service will be held in this city, which will be attended by admirers of the late statesman from many sections of the United States, as well as from Ohio.

Friends declared that he literally sacrificed his life for a principle. His tireless fight for the three-cent fare upon street cars in Cleveland against the tremendous odds placed in his way by opponents of the scheme undermined his health and he never completely recovered.

BOOM WILSON IN HARMON'S OWN CITY

CINCINNATI, O., April 11.—Governor Judson Harmon of Ohio is to have the opposition of people of his home city in his fight for the Presidential nomination. The agency to carry this opposition into effect is a publication known as the "Political Outlook," the first number of which appeared here yesterday. In this publication Governor Wilson of New Jersey is given a full page picture and a page of reading matter, in which many qualifications for election are pointed out. Even Bryan is quoted as saying that he will come out later with several reasons why Harmon should not be named. Harmon is said to have not shown in his three years of public office to be the man for the progressive branch of the party, and Lieutenant-Governor Hugh L. Nichols of Ohio is made the target for an attack because he divides his time between Columbus and Harmon's Presidential office here.

SUFFRAGETTES WILL ACQUIRE "THE PUNCH"

NEW YORK, April 11.—Plans of the English suffragette to develop their muscles and place their physical strength on par with man's, received public endorsement in New York to-day. "I am heartily in accord with the idea, for stronger situations need stronger women," said Mrs. Sophia Loeidinger, leader of the American movement. "I see no reason why women should not make good boxers. A good punch is all that is necessary for a fighter and women can surely obtain this. There is no professional woman who would not be better off with a knowledge of boxing. I hope to see such institutions as the Women's Development Society instituted in the United States."

MISS SLATER DELAYS TRIAL

After Milton police had waited for two hours in Quincy District Court for Miss Esther Slater of Milton to appear to answer to a charge of overspeeding her touring car last Friday, a telephone query came over the long-distance from New York from Miss Slater's lawyer, asking for a postponement.

The name of the lawyer, as Superintendent Pierce of the Milton police understood it, is "Birney."

"I'm in New York," said Birney. "Can't this hearing be postponed? I'll call you up to-night and make a date with you for another hearing."

Being nothing if not accommodating, Superintendent Pierce said "All right," and is now waiting for Birney to call him up to-night and fix a date.

Miss Esther Slater is one of the four children of the late H. N. Slater of Milton, whose big estate has been much before the courts of late. Last Friday Patrolman William Fallon of the Milton automobile squad chased Miss Slater in her big car and notified her to come into court. Miss Slater said she would be in court to-day. Last night she telephoned Superintendent Pierce she would be on hand. Fallon and Pierce were there to-day, but Miss Slater did not appear. The long-distance call from Birney explained matters.

The Milton police say that they have had complaints of late about Miss Esther Slater and one of her brothers overspeeding.

AFTER THE GRIP

If You Do Not Recover Your Usual Health Try This Treatment.

For three years after an attack of the grip Mrs. C. B. Pierce, of South Britain, Conn., was in poor health and found no relief until she built up her blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She says:

"I attribute my sickness directly to an attack of the grip. I had fainting spells, which came on me without warning. I would faint away while sitting in a chair or lying in bed. After recovering from them I would be deathly sick for a week or so. I became so much worse that I began to have two or three fainting spells a day. These spells so weakened me that I had scarcely enough strength to get around. My limbs would become swollen especially at night. My sleep was broken for I was extremely nervous and apprehensive of some impending danger. I had severe headaches most of the time and a darting pain over my left eye which affected the whole side of my head. I was troubled with neuralgic pains around my heart and was frequently confined to my bed.

"During two years of my sickness I was treated at different times by three doctors. Their treatment did not afford me relief so I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. A few boxes of the pills gave me much benefit. My headaches became less severe and I began to feel better in every way. I gave the pills a good trial and was completely cured. I am in good health now and praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for they undoubtedly saved me from years of suffering."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have also cured anæmia, chlorosis, general debility, rheumatism and after-effects of fevers and should be given a trial wherever a tonic for the blood and nerves is needed.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are always the same and are sold only in packages bearing the well-known trade-mark and are guaranteed by the manufacturers to contain no opiate, narcotic or anything that could injure the most delicate system.

The genuine are sold by all druggists or will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. A valuable booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," containing fuller information will be sent free upon request.

CALL EVERYBODY IN LORIMER CASE

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 11.—Practically every member of the Legislature which elected William Lorimer to the United States Senate has been summoned to appear before the State Senate investigating committee to testify as to the alleged bribery of the lawmakers by corporations. Twenty senators, fifteen from Chicago, were ordered by Speaker Oglesby to-day to be brought to Springfield. The charge was absence from the Senate without permission.

State's Attorney Burke of Sagamon County to-day announced that he was ready to open fire on Edward Hines or any others who may be charged with perjury as a result of the disclosures of bribery in the election of William Lorimer to the United States Senate before the Helm investigating committee.

He said he contemplated bringing Hines before the Grand Jury that conducts the investigation of the legislative corruption following the confessions of White, Holstlaw, Broderick and Link. Michael Link, who confessed that he received $1,000 for his Lorimer vote, died in the bathtub of his home in Edwardsville yesterday. The next Grand Jury will begin operations on the first Monday in May. The jurors have been selected.

Burke said he did not wish to appear as obtruding in the Helm committee, but that he is watching the case closely and probably would cause a Grand Jury inquiry as a result of the testimony given before the committee by H. H. Kohlsaat, publisher of the Chicago Record-Herald, and Clarence S. Funk.

"The late developments have given us a basis on which to work," he asserted. "Before this time there was a missing strand of testimony, which made convictions practically impossible."

A transcript of the evidence taken so far by the State Senate investigating committee will be sent to Senator Robert M. La Follette for use in his fight in the United States Senate to oust Lorimer. The evidence already fills more than 500 typewritten pages and contains the testimony of Kohlsaat and Clarence S. Funk, manager of the International Harvester Company, who charged directly that Edward Hines, the lumber millionaire, asked him to contribute to the $100,000 fund raised to "put Lorimer over."

ROOSEVELT'S FORMER BODYGUARD ARRESTED

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Charged with sending munitions of war to Mexico, supposedly for use by the revolutionists under a false label, Harvey E. Phillips, former body guard to President Roosevelt, known socially in Washington and New York, and also as the best detective and spy in the service of the Mexican insurgents, has been arrested here and is out on bail to-day. The warrant was sworn out by officials of the Department of Justice, whom he has eluded for months. Bail was fixed at $1,000. While the revolution is spreading in all directions throughout Mexico word is being carried among the insurrectos that General Bernardo Reyes is on his way home.

DECLARES BOSTON LOVES SALOONS

E. T. Vornick of Cochituate, in a report on city evangelization, made to the New England Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Cambridge, says:

"Philadelphia is not only corrupt, but it is contented in its corruption. Earthquakes and fire have not rid San Francisco of its civic evils. Boston still loves the open saloon; it bombards the Legislature with substitutes for the bar and bottle; it cries out against a Puritan Sabbath."

PASTOR URGES NUDE ART IN SCHOOLS

ITHACA, April 11.—"If I had my way I would place in every school in the land a statue of a perfect woman and a perfect man, absolutely nude," said the Rev. William Eliot Griffis, retired Congregationalist pastor, lecturer and authority on Japan, in an address here. He said that by doing so the pupils would see what a perfectly formed body looked like, and if the statues were in modest attitudes the result would be for moral uplift.

SPAIN'S TROOPS TO CRUSH REVOLT

MADRID, April 11.—Although the Spanish government professes to feel no alarm over the proclamation of a republic by residents of the village of Canillas de Aceituno, in Malaga, nevertheless it is so strongly indicative of the feeling throughout Spain that the Republicans, Socialists and Radicals are preparing to make capital out of it. A strong force of troops was moved into the province of Malaga to-day to prevent further spread of the outbreak.

GOODWIN RAPS TAX METHODS

chusetts Hospital Life Insurance Company for $52,000, or 80 per cent. of assessed valuation. He said that the Exeter Chambers were assessed for $168,000 and mortgaged to the same company for $135,000.

Regarding these cases Mr. Goodwin said:

"Either your board is assessing improperly or the bank is lending illegally, since the statute provides that a savings bank cannot loan on more than 60 per cent. of the actual value of property."

Romney Spring, who represented Nathan Matthews at the hearing, denied that the Board of Assessors in levying taxes had shown any favoritism toward the former Mayor and former Finance Commission chief.

Mr. Goodwin then rehearsed his charges in regard to the assessment of the Hotel Bellevue property, and in explaining some new charges said that the board of underwriters required of an owner wanting guaranteed insurance a statement in writing signed by two master builders or architects as to the value of a structure, if it is new. He cited cases to show that the assessors do not seek valuations for assessing taxes as closely as underwriters do in placing insurance.

Mr. Goodwin then cited these cases to sustain his contention of undervaluation by the assessors a compared with the estimated value placed by the underwriters:

Location	Assessed Val. Bldg.	Under Val.
87-89 Court street	$10,000	$28,000
7 Water street	126,000	225,000
38-52 Merchants row	21,500	57,000
1-4 Tremont row	4,900	40,000

"If the assessors are not aware of these facts they ought to be," he said, "for rate cards containing the information is on the record in every large insurance office in Boston, and in the office of the Boston Underwriters.

"While it is a well known fact that land in the heart of the city, owned mostly by real estate trusts is greatly undervalued, as is shown by occasional transfers, it is hard to get the facts from real estate dealers or the parties in interest. The true values of buildings are also carefully guarded, nevertheless they are obtainable.

"I admit that homes assessed in Dorchester, Brighton and Roxbury are higher than anywhere in the country, but that is because property controlled by Minot, Bowditch, Cotting, Williams, Gardner, et al., is assessed for 74 per cent., 56 per cent., 39 per cent., 33 per cent. and even 12½ per cent. of its real valuation. These men who control 50 per cent. of the real estate in the heart of the city also control the whole uplift movement in Boston, the Good Government Association, Municipal League, Charter Guards and Finance Commission.

Puts It Up to Mayor.

"It is up to the Mayor to lift the department out of the rut it is in. Make the assessors put up the valuation on property belonging to wealthy men where it belongs. If this is done the small owner will get a square deal."

Principal Assessor E. B. Daily defended the department against the charges brought by Goodwin. He said that the assessors had to take into consideration the whole valuation of property in levying assessments and that the figures on buildings alone did not necessarily show that property was undervalued.

Secretary Folsom of the Board of Assessors explained the abatements on the Matthews properties and said that Goodwin was arguing without a knowledge of the facts.

John Shepard of the firm of Shepard Norwell protested against the taxes on the concern's property being further increased. He said that it cost three times as much to run their business as in the old days, and that the firm necessarily did not do business at such a profit. He argued that it was manifestly unfair to keep increasing the value of the property when the increased value was not there. If the city has to raise so much money because its expenses are increasing, let them raise the tax rate. Make it $20 per thousand if necessary, but don't put values on buildings that are not fair."

Shuman Protests Increase.

W. E. Simons and Edwin A. Shuman appeared for A. Shuman. The former read a letter from the Boston merchant in which he protested against any advanced assessments on his property at the corner of Washington and Summer streets. During the past ten years nearly $50,000 had been added to taxes on his property, he said, so that at present it is taxed for $1,525,000 as against $891,000 in 1898.

"All this increase on the same piece of property is certainly not justified on an increase o. population or business during a period of ten years," according to Mr. Shuman. "According to a custom established here, and which is hardly known in any other city, the tenant pays not only the rent required to do business, but is burdened in addition with this constantly increasing taxation and the owner makes no protest against the increase because his tenant pays it.

"PRICEMARK OF WAIST SHOUTED 'FOOD'; I WAS STARVING AND STOLE"

How many readers of the Boston AMERICAN know how it feels to starve—actually starve for three days?

A woman who did it while she walked the streets of Boston looking in vain for work told the story to-day. She is Miss Sarah Garrity of No. 7 Lawrence street, South End.

She went into a store. She saw a shirtwaist. The price-mark swam before her eyes. It meant money—money! It meant food. She took the shirtwaist, but was too weak to get out of the store and was arrested. Then her story came out and she was placed on probation. She thought of suicide. But her pride stayed her and again she faced the weary world.

"With me," said the woman, "it was a case of steal or starve. I could not beg. I simply could not.

Alone Since Mother Died.

"My life had been getting harder and harder every day. Since my mother died, four years ago, I have been alone. For six years before that I had nursed her, and when she died my nerves gave way and I was sick for months. My expenses and hers ate up every penny of the little I had saved, and since then I have only managed to scrape along.

"I am a dressmaker, working by the day, when I get the chance. I had steady work last Summer, during the hot months, and I guess the strain was too heavy, for last Autumn I was sick again, and after I had recovered there was nothing left. I could not get work. I went to the Y. W. C. A. and asked for help to find a position. It was always 'Come around to-morrow and there may be something' with them, but there never was anything when I went around 'to-morrow.'

"Then I went to the fitting department of one of the department stores. There it was the same story, 'to-morrow.' The continual uncertainty was driving me mad. Finally, my money gave out. I had not a cent. I spent my last dime for supper one night, and the next morning my landlady asked for the room rent. I could not pay it and she did not press me, but I dreaded having her ask again.

Price Mark Shouted "Food."

"I went on a last desperate search for work. One whole day I tramped from store to store and in the afternoon I tried some private houses. I had nothing to eat. The next day I did not feel like getting up. I lay in bed till 10 o'clock. Then, I forced myself to get up and dress and take up the hunt for a simple chance to earn a little money. I stayed out two hours that day, but found nothing. The next day was the same. I tried a dozen stores, hoping to find something that I had overlooked.

"Finally I went into a department store. There was a pile of shirtwaists on the counter. While I waited to speak to the lady, I stood beside the counter. There was a card with a price marked on it, and the figures seemed to swim in my head. I could see them chasing around.

"I could hear them shouting of the food they would buy, of the debts they would pay. I forced myself to turn away, to look for the lady in charge. She was busy at the other end of the store. No one was looking at me. And the figures kept chasing in my head. You see, I had not eaten anything for about three days, and you think strange things sometimes when you haven't eaten.

To Weak to Walk Away.

"Well, I took one of the waists. I had my muff with me. I slipped the waist into the muff. Then I tried to start for the door, but I was too weak to walk. So I leaned back against the counter, and as I looked up, a man was coming towards me. You see, I had not been clever enough. And I thought no one had seen me.

"The judge suspended my sentence. The probation officer said he would get me work. So they let me leave, and I went out, ashamed to go to my room. I thought of killing myself. But the old spark of pride, and the little bit of bravery that is in everyone, I guess, kept me from doing it. And so, he says I will have a place to work next Wednesday. But that will be only temporary, a home for a little while. I will have quit wondering what I will do afterward."

Miss Garrity is forty-nine years old. Her thick hair has grayed with trouble, and her face is tired, so that some might think her older. She has been a seamstress all her life.

"As long ago as I can remember," she continued, "I have been sewing and supporting my mother. We did very well, and even managed to save a little money. But she was not well, and I had to be with her all the time. That is why I never married. I couldn't." A far-away look came into her eyes. "I couldn't," she repeated, as though arguing with someone whom her memory conjured from the past. "And so I worked ahead, doing the best I could. But ten years ago my mother got sick, and her doctor bills were heavy. And so here I am."

THIS SIMPLE LOTION GREAT AID TO BEAUTY

"The nearest approach to the fountain of youth," writes Mrs. Mae Martyn in the Los Angeles Herald, "is spurmax—beautifying and inexpensive. This made into a face lotion is marvelous for clearing, beautifying and preserving the complexion.

"Any woman can make this lotion by getting four ounces spurmax from the druggist, dissolving in a half-pint hot water and adding two teaspoonfuls glycerine. This gently massaged into the skin becomes invisible, does not rub off easily like powder, and for a natural aid to beauty cannot be equaled.

"This spurmax lotion is far superior to powders, cosmetics or skin foods and quickly corrects a rough, oily, shiny, sallow or lifeless condition, giving the complexion a smooth, satiny tone. Once you try it, you will have no further use for face powder."

FOLK TO PROSECUTE NINE-YEAR EXILE

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 11.—Circuit Attorney Jones has put the entire prosecution of Ellis Wainwright, a multi-millionaire, who returned to St. Louis to be charged with bribery after nine years' exile in Paris, in the hands of former Governor Folk. Folk was Circuit Attorney when Wainwright was indicted. He says the death and absence of witnesses may hamper the State, but that it can be proved that $135,000 was raised to procure the passage of a franchise bill for the St. Louis & Suburban Railroad, and that Wainwright as one of the directors of the company signed the note on which the money was raised.

FIRE IN A MAIL CAR.

While the New York mail train was being made up to-day at South Station smoke was discovered coming from one of the new mail cars. The yard foreman summoned the fire apparatus, and the blaze, which necessitated tearing out one side of the car, was extinguished. There was no mail in the car at the time.

EDWARD PALMER DEAD.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Dr. Edward Palmer, veteran botanical explorer, and one of the most widely known botanists in the world, is dead here, aged eighty years. For years he was connected with the National Museum, Smithsonian Institution and the Bureau of Ethnology.

OUR FUR STORAGE THE BEST

To keep furs in good condition it is necessary to keep them in a temperature similar to the climatic conditions that exist where fur-bearing animals are found. The cold, uniform temperature of our scientific storage system improves the lustre, tightens the fur and guarantees your furs to last longer and look better for having been stored with us.

A Saving of $5 to $10 On Every Woman's

EASTER SUIT at $15.00

A Maker Who Expected Unusually Pleasant Weather for the Months of March and April Made Up a Good Many More Suits Than His Orders Called For. The Continued Bad Weather of the Past Month Left These Suits On His Hands and Rather Than Hold Them Longer He Sold Them to Us so We Could Sell Them at $15.

But remember, they are not so-called $20.00 and $25.00 suits, but suits that other stores, who have bought of this same maker, are forced to sell at $20.00 and $25.00, and are no doubt considering them good values at even $30.00.

Suits that are in the very newest and up-to-date spring models, being made for this season's selling and are perfect fitting, and the tailoring is faultless. Most of them are in strictly tailored models with the newest conceits in collar trimmings, and some are very neatly and artistically trimmed with silk braid. The Coats are in the desired lengths and all are lined with peau de cygne satin. The Skirts are in the latest models. All the new spring colorings are included, with plenty of the most demand, navy and black. Second Floor

REVOLT IN NEW HAMPSHIRE OVER TREACHERY OF THE SENATE

STATE LAWMAKERS CONFESS TO SHARE IN ALL NIGHT DANCING ORGY.

Fervent Prayer for Senators

"Prepare us, Oh Lord, for all the midnight surprises that may come to us through the pen."—From the prayer made by the Rev. C. H. Farnsworth, acting chaplain of the Senate, in opening the session of the New Hampshire Legislature.

A wave of trouble is rolling over New Hampshire. It assumes a two-fold aspect.

First, the people are indignant at the disgraceful betrayal of their trust by the thirteen Senators who killed the progressive legislation that was promised by both political parties.

Second, the moral feeling of the State is outraged at the cork-popping-girlie-bridal suite midnight dinner that the thirteen (significant number, that) held to ratify their success in their Judas-like business.

No wonder that the Rev. C. H. Farnsworth, the Methodist clergyman from Penacook, who acted as chaplain in opening the Legislature in the New Hampshire House of Representatives, prayed fervently that there would be no more midnight Senatorial suppers!

"Prepare us, Oh Lord," said the clergyman, "for all the midnight surprises that may come to us through the pen."

All of the recreant Senators were present. They bowed their heads. Back in the room there was an audible "Amen."

The Concord Patriot, which is more than a century old, suggested to-day that the Legislature set apart two hours to-morrow for "inquiries, explanations and denials" on the part of those who have betrayed the people and then flaunted the fact in their face by holding a dinner orgy.

The Sunday AMERICAN told the truthful story of how the Senators had blocked the legislation that the people had promised. Norman Hapgood, editor of Collier's, pointed out in a Ford Hall speech Sunday evening that the AMERICAN was the only paper that had the courage to tell this story to the people of New Hampshire and to the rest of New England.

Nothing has ever been published that so perturbed the people of the staid old Granite State as the banquet at Hotel Rockingham a week ago Monday evening, which made the Seeley dinner in New York some years ago look like a Dennett-Child lunch, according to the stories that have been told about it.

It comes out to-day that the promoters of the dinner took pains to have Mr. Guptill, the prosecuting attorney of the county, there. The prosecuting attorney said to the AMERICAN to-day that he didn't see anything in the dances to censor. He probably meant by that that about everything had been left out, including clothing, that could be.

There were thirty-one at the dinner. The names of about half that number, including the thirteen Senators, have been published.

The others are shaking in their boots for fear that the fact that they were there will come out.

The first of New Hampshire's Senatorial revelers have confessed. To-day they told all about their midnight carnival of dancing girlies and beer, whiskey and cocktails.

Vivid details are given first-hand of the naughty-naughty antics of the four Boston young women who danced in fleshings to the huge entertainment of the thirteen Senators and their railroad guests who sat in at the now notorious Portsmouth orgies.

The first confessions have sent the scare into the rank and file of the Senatorial Club of dancing girl dinner fame. Not all the Senators have suffered a change of heart. But those that haven't are to-day finding what refuge they can. Conservative New Hampshire folk, who were shocked by the expose of the senatorial merry-making in immodest manner, were electrified to-day when they learned the Senators were showing their true colors, being routed out of their stand-pattism, had thrown up their hands and cried "quits."

Scored by Expose.

Revolution could not have wrought more havoc in the New Hampshire Senate. To-day marked the opening of the last week's session of the State Legislature. But it marked something more than that. It marked the slaughter of obstructionists, at least for the time being.

Dispatches from Concord to-day stated that many of the obstructionists have promised to be good, and vote for some of the Bass measures.

Senator Jonathan M. Cheney of Ashland to-day made a whole-souled confession of the part he played in the Rockingham House revelries. The story he tells of the Portsmouth orgies rivals the lively account given of the dancing girl dinner by Alice Montague, one of the dancers.

In all, to-day, four new members joined the Excuse Club, started by Lawyer John W. Kelley, counsel for the Boston & Maine.

As a last straw came the mock session of the House of Representatives, in the State House at Concord. Here were ridiculed the thirteen Senators who attended the dancing girl dinner, to the great embarrassment of Senators Cheney and Alvin B. Cross, of Concord, who were present at the sitting.

The wave of indignation which has swept throughout the Granite State waxed greatly to-day. Leading ministers and religious workers denounced the State Senate, individually and collectively. Rev. Dr. Virgil V. Johnson in an interview with the AMERICAN declared the Senate in great part a body of incompetents, who were incapable of discussing intelligently momentous questions on the Senate floor, and who are "more ignorant than many Concord school boys."

Rev. Dr. Johnson compared the Senators who violated their pledges to the people to men who are jailed for obtaining money under false pretences.

Another surprise that came to-day was the knowledge that Ernest Guptill, prosecuting attorney of Rockingham county, within whose jurisdiction the Portsmouth orgies had taken place, had himself been present at the Senatorial joy-feast. Attorney Guptill said to-day he will not prosecute the case, even if complaint is made on the ground of alleged immoral exhibition by the four Boston dancing girls before the thirteen State Senators and their railroad friends.

Senator Cheney's Excuse.

"That dinner down to Portsmouth," said Senator Cheney, who is a physician in his town of Ashland, "was a very digestible one."

And then he smiled cheerily. A moment later he was rolling an eye as if in an endeavor to glimpse the ghost of some of the things he had enjoyed.

"But I did not sample the drinks," continued the Senator. He grinned. In a moment he showed the wherefore for the broad wrinkling of his countenance.

"You see, I didn't sample the drinks, because I was on the water wagon. That's a pretty good reason, eh?"

And then the Senator smiled some more. 'Deedy, he seemed to be quite spry on the topic of the Portsmouth blowout. And why shouldn't he be? He had a good time. He confessed it. He also confessed a number of other things. Here they are:

"I didn't see any champagne, though there may have been some there. Come to think of it, I guess the girls had some. What did I see? Well, there were cocktails and beer. Yes, sir, cocktails and beer. I meant what I said. Cocktails and beer. And, too, there was whiskey upstairs in the room. (Room was not specified, but probably referred to a Senatorial loophole of retreat.)

"No. I refrained from tasting one drop. Because I had sworn off, I didn't get in on it. You see a man that's on the water wagon isn't hankering after the liquors like the fellows that drink right along.

"Now about that entertainment. I was there expecting to see something pretty warm. I admit that. Pretty warm. But when I saw the show, I called it a little bit tame. It wasn't what I expected. But perhaps the reason was that I was on the water wagon. It didn't appeal to me as being bad or indecent. I've seen things pretty near as bad on the public stage.

"My friend, Senator Cross, may be a churchman, but he hasn't such an awful lot on me. I am interested in church business, too—everything from a Catholic church down to the Salvation Army, and honestly, that entertainment didn't even make a dent in me. No, sir, there wasn't a mark left to show where it had made an impression.

"The stunts done by the girls weren't very suggestive. Fact is that they weren't much worse than the things you sometimes see in some theatres.

"That Montague girl was some dancer. Those living picture girls lived up to their reputation, I guess. That Ford girl certainly did hand out some funny stories. And the girls did not do half the talking, either, neither did the girls do all the singing. I am not sure but I did a little singing myself.

"But there was nothing very wrong about it all. A good many present had seen worse things than that. And I was in no hurry to get out."

The "end-quote" comes at this point. The AMERICAN reporter was plainly willing to have the Senator continue with his confessions of pleasure in the Hotel Rockingham orgies. But the Senator just grinned as he brought his voice to a halt by putting a full-stop at the finish.

SENATOR JOHN CROSS—"They all look alike to me."

SENATOR CLARENCE PAUL—"Why, 'twas fit for a President to see."

SENATOR JONATHAN M. CHENEY—"I was on the water wagon."

CHARTER MEMBERS OF NEW HAMPSHIRE'S EXCUSE CLUB.

The Senator didn't say any more. But, really, he had confessed enough.

Senator Haven Doe, when he was seen at Concord, to-day, didn't have as long a confession to make as did his Ashland colleague.

"I have nothing to deny, excuse, or explain," said Senator Doe, to an AMERICAN reporter. "I went for a good lobster dinner. I had one and witnessed the entertainment. I just accepted what was prepared for us in the spirit in which it was offered."

Alike Senators Doe and Cheney, Senator Alvin B. Cross of Concord was in on the jollification in Portsmouth, and like the others, thoroughly enjoyed what took place, both as to layout of victuals and dancers in tights. Senator Cross had clapped the lid down on his personal publicity bureau when he was seen by an AMERICAN reporter in Concord to-day.

"I don't think I'll say anything about the dinner or anything related to it," said the Senator. And that was all he would say. His friends had it that he would make a statement later. He is said to have confided to his intimates that just now he feared his constituents might misunderstand him if he talked. His friends expect him to follow the precedent set by his colleagues very soon in the way of making a confession.

Senator John H. Cross of Colebrook, another who saw the "sights," was shy about an evasion of the orgy theme.

"I have attended a lot of dinners lately," he declared, and he wouldn't go any further.

Guptill Won't Prosecute.

Lawyer Ernest Guptill, prosecuting attorney for Rockingham County, attended the now notorious "Excuse" Club's dinner at the Hotel Rockingham in Portsmouth, along with his brother, Senator George Herbert Guptill of Raymond, it became known to-day. The Rockingham House, where the merry-girlie feast was held, is in Attorney Guptill's jurisdiction. Should there be any formal complaint on the ground of alleged indecency in the dancing-girl feature, it would be up to Guptill to prosecute.

But Guptill isn't going to prosecute. He intimated as much in a talk with an AMERICAN reporter at Portsmouth to-day. Asked if he would take any action, he replied that there "was no violation of the law; absolutely none."

Evidently, Attorney Guptill takes the stand of the man who was Johnny-on-the-spot. Therefore, he ought to know, he thinks. He wasn't at the dinner in an official capacity. He was there to enjoy the dinner and entertainment. He was satisfied. So no matter what New Hampshire people think, he won't be likely to prosecute.

Attorney Guptill had to be prodded by a series of questions before he would talk.

"How about the dance end of the program?" he was asked by an AMERICAN reporter.

His answer came:

"I fail to see anything immodest in the entertainment, especially the dancing. It was nothing but what is seen in clubs and on the vaudeville stage every night.

"Sure, the girls were certainly not dressed in fur coats, but there was truly nothing offensive in the rig they wore."

"What about the champagne?"

"If there was any champagne there, I didn't see it," was Mr. Guptill's come-back. "We had nothing but light Portsmouth beer and not enough of that to hurt anybody."

Senator Cheney has confessed there was plenty of whiskey, cocktails and beer, and he didn't specify the beer as particularly light, either.

But to continue with Attorney Guptill's statement:

"This beer we had was the same kind of beer that was on the tables when Governor Bass attended a dinner last Wednesday at Concord. The Governor's dinner was attended by high State officials, Senators, Representatives and others. There was no 'how' about that.

"We had some of the progressives at the Rockingham House dinner who thoroughly enjoyed the feast and the entertainment as well as the rest of the party. Everybody had a good time. We had no liquor whatsoever in the reception room."

Q.—(By the reporter) Mr. Guptill, there were only thirteen Senators who came to Portsmouth, and there were thirty-one plates set; were all the chairs occupied?

A.—(By Guptill) Yes.

Q.—Who filled the seats?

A.—I don't care to say.

Q.—Mr. Guptill, will you take action as prosecuting attorney?

A.—There was no violation of the law; absolutely none. There is nothing for me to do.

Q.—Can you decline to say just who were the people who occupied the thirty-one chairs at the tables that weren't filled by the Senators and yourself?

A.—There has been too much said already. Now I won't say any more.

The State Senators who are generally regarded as ring leaders in the girlie dinner at the Rockingham House have been severely condemned by Portsmouth citizens, by religious workers particularly. A few of the Senators and some of the guests are freed from blame, the popular belief being that this contingent was nailed to the banquet hall ignorant of the surprises in store.

"I don't care to talk, except to say that I don't believe that Portsmouth people who attended the dinner had any idea of witnessing any immoral performance, if there was one."

President Frank E. Leavitt of the Y. M. C. A. said he would be unwilling to give an opinion on the girlie-fleshings-feast until he had heard both sides of the story.

The Rev. Dr. L. H. Thayer, pastor of the North Congregational Church of Portsmouth, said:

"I don't know much about the dinner. Therefore, I can't discuss this subject at any length. I am sure, however, that some of those who attended the banquet had no idea where they were going; that I know. Further than that I have nothing to say at present."

'LET THE POLITICIANS HAVE THE ROW OUT,' SAYS ENTERTAINER

Miss Marie Ford, the Back Bay girl who entertained the thirteen Senators and their friends in Portsmouth with her "funny" stories, didn't want to be interviewed. Goodness gracious, no—emphatically no. Wasn't it just a business proposition with her to amuse the Senators?

"Why, I am a decent woman," she declared. "I am married, and my reputation is of the best. So why should I mix myself up in these matters. Such a state of affairs doesn't appeal to me. A decent girl must stay out of it. Let Montague tell it. See Montague. She'll tell you all you want to know.

"Did I drink champagne? Well, I don't care if the Senator said we did. I am not going to reply one way or the other. You can't mix me up in this shameful political thing. I don't care if my friends think I did drink champagne. I don't care one way or the other. It doesn't bother me in the least bit. I don't feel that I've got to defend myself. Let the politicians have the row out among themselves but for heaven's sake, leave the girls out of it. We don't need to be dragged into a rampus like this. Believe me, I want to be forgotten.

BASS READY TO FIGHT WITH SENATE FOR NEW LAWS

CONCORD, N. H., April 11.—Governor Robert P. Bass would not discuss to-day

ACTION BY LEGISLATURE AND LOCAL AUTHORITIES IS CALLED FOR.

the girlie-girlie racket the Senatorial Club had at Portsmouth. He said he preferred not to touch on the matter. But he did have something to say in regard to the sixteen State Senators of New Hampshire who have violated their promises to the people and are doing the bidding of the interests.

"I will say that I shall continue to do all in my power to get enacted into law those measures that we promised the people in the past campaign," said the Governor to-day. "The measures touching party elections, corporation expenditures, publicity as to contributions and many others were passed in good form. We secured good child labor legislation and measures for the suppression of baby farms—in this last of which a woman of your city of Boston, Miss Mary Boyle O'Reilly, gave us so much assistance.

"What will be done touching certain representatives of the people remains for future consideration. I touched upon this in my special message of March 9, when I wrote:

"'I am convinced that the necessity which rests upon the Legislature of carrying out the mandates of the popular will as expressed with unanimity in the party platform is of so great and far-reaching importance that for the preservation of "the whole fabric of the constitution in one indissoluble bond of union and amity" it is necessary for every citizen of the State, and particularly for the chief executive of the State, to call upon the legislative department of the government for the fulfillment of its duty to the people. If that duty is not fulfilled, I believe it will be a conspicuous failure of representative government and will be so understood by the people of New Hampshire.'"

Progressives here declared to-day that the governor may undertake some radical action, the nature of which they did not disclose. The obstructionists were quick to come out with words in their own defence to-day. They apparently perceive the wave of popular indignation which has swept over the State since the expose of the "special interest" Senate in the Sunday AMERICAN. The obstructionists to-day claimed they have assisted the governor and that they are ready to serve him before the end of the week.

589 TREMONT STREET
BOSTON, MASS.

A BOLD STEP

To overcome the well-grounded and reasonable objections of the more intelligent to the use of secret, medicinal compounds, Dr. R V Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., some time ago, decided to make a bold departure from the usual course pursued by the makers of put-up medicines for domestic use, and so has published broad-cast and openly to the whole world, a full and complete list of all the ingredients entering into the composition of his widely celebrated medicines

Thus Dr. Pierce has taken his numerous patrons and patients into his full confidence. Thus too he has removed his medicines from among secret nostrums of doubtful merits and placed them in a class all by themselves by making them remedies OF KNOWN COMPOSITION. By this bold step Dr. Pierce has shown that his formulas are of such excellence that he is not afraid to subject them to the fullest scrutiny.

Not only does the wrapper of every bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the famous medicine for weak stomach, torpid liver or biliousness and all catarrhal diseases wherever located, have printed upon it in plain English, a full and complete list of all the ingredients composing it, but a small book has been compiled from numerous standard medical works, of all the different schools of practice, containing very numerous extracts from the writings of leading practitioners of medicine, endorsing in the strongest possible terms, each and every ingredient contained in Dr. Pierce's medicines. One of these little books will be mailed free to any one sending address on postal card or by letter, to Dr R V Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and requesting the same

From this little book it will be learned that Dr. Pierce's medicines contain no alcohol, narcotics, mineral agents or other poisonous or injurious agents and that they are made from native, medicinal roots of great value; also that some of the most valuable ingredients contained in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for weak, nervous, overworked, "run-down," nervous and debilitated women, were employed, long years ago, by the Indians for similar ailments affecting their squaws. In fact, one of the most valuable medicinal plants entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription was known to the Indians as "Squaw-Weed." Our knowledge of the uses of not a few of our most valuable native, medicinal plants was gained from the Indians

As made up by improved and exact processes, the "Favorite Prescription" is a most efficient remedy for regulating all the womanly functions, correcting displacements, as prolapsus, anteversion and retroversion, overcoming painful periods, toning up the nerves and bringing about a perfect state of health. Sold by all dealers in medicines.

CAN CONWAY COME BACK? YES

Members of the Boston Police and Fire Departments are ready to back Michael F. Conway as the original "come-back kid." First Mr. Conway was a fireman. Then he wasn't a fireman. Next he was a policeman. Then he wasn't a policeman, but a dairy inspector. Now he's a policeman again. Can you beat Mr. Conway on the come-back proposition?

In March, 1905, Conway was appointed to the Fire Department and assigned to Truck 13, Warren avenue, serving there until the latter part of June, when he quit. Being on the inside look out at folks enjoying themselves was not to Conway's liking.

After an absence of almost two years Conway's desire to be a real fireman "came back" and he took another Civil Service examination. The Fire Commissioner ordered him to report to Engine 20, Walnut street, Neponset. Conway, however, figured it out that Neponset was a long way from Spring street, West Roxbury, where he was born and raised and where he played in the outfield and pitched for a local baseball nine, playing the game with one eye and watching his father's cows grazing in the extreme corner of left field with the other.

Conway did not go back to the fire service, but took a police department examination, which he passed. June 22, 1908, he was assigned to the Back Bay Police Station. He did good work there as a policeman and besides was one of the division's best entertainers. "Steve" Flaherty would rattle off popular airs on the piano and Conway would sing.

Then news was received at the Police station that Conway had received a notice of his appointment as a diary inspector. He qualified for that position while driving his father's milk wagon at West Roxbury.

To-day they learned that Conway is on again. The young man, tiring of his dairy inspector's job, asked to be reinstated as a policeman and Commissioner O'Meara granted his request, as he bore an excellent record. Conway is back at the Boylston Street Station and the glad hand was passed out to him. Everybody was glad that he is on again and all hope he will stay.

His brother is Representative John J. Conway of Ward 28.

PASSOVER SERVICES FOR IMMIGRANTS

Morris I. Silton, president of the Benoth Israel Charitable Society, has arranged with Commissioner of Immigration George B. Billings for the Jews detained on Long wharf to celebrate the coming Passover in orthodox fashion. The season begins Wednesday and lasts eight days. The unleavened bread and other foods required by the Mosaic law will be furnished by the Benoth Israel Society and the Jewish Immigrants' Aid Society. There are at present only six or eight Jews being detained, but it is expected that the Cunarder Ivernia, due to dock within a few days, will bring over more. Separate apartments will be set apart as prayer rooms for the men and Boston rabbis will hold services during the Passover season.

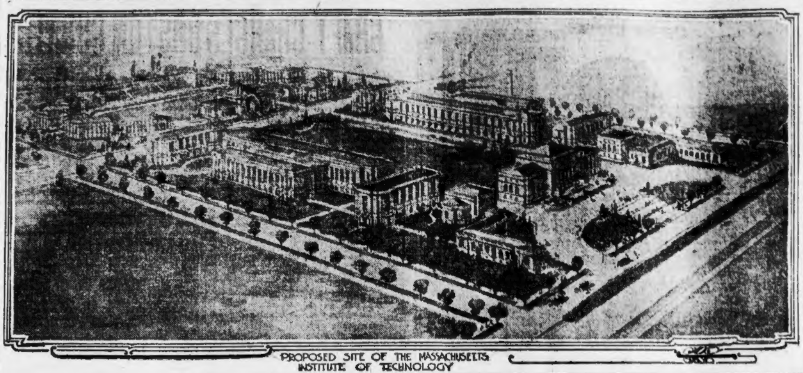
Architect's Building Plan of New Home for Technology



PROPOSED SITE OF THE MASSACHUSETTS INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY

NEW SITE FOR TECH IS PICKED

The Congress of Technology, principal feature of the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Tech, opened for the second and last day of its sessions to-day. The features were greater than at yesterday's session, and the congress sat from 11 in the morning until 4 in the afternoon.

Interest in the anniversary to-day centered in the announcement expected this afternoon of the new location for Technology. All sessions of the congress were open to the public and they were thronged with students, alumni and the public. The celebration closes to-night with a monster subscription banquet in Symphony Hall, to commence at 7 o'clock. Prominent speakers will address the gathering.

It was announced to-day that President Maclaurin had accepted plans for the new set of buildings. The location has also been decided upon. More than forty cities have been considered. The plans call for a general group of handsome buildings encircling two lots, a campus and an athletic field.

Plans for New Site.

The plot of land, wherever it may be, will be divided into two parts, the larger, of about twenty-five acres, will be laid out with the regular buildings of the institute surrounding a quadrangle or campus, the smaller approximately of fifteen acres, will be used wholly for the student quarters, the Walker Memorial and the dormitories, encircling the athletic field.

On the plan at the extreme left is the Naval Architectural Building, and following along in order are the Administration Building, which will contain the general offices of the institute, the general library, etc. Next on the right is the Mechanical Engineering Department and the Power House, which is shown by its chimney over the Mechanical Engineering Building. Then comes the Biological Department, with the Civil Building on the extreme right.

Directly in the centre of the background on the smaller part of the property is the Walker Memorial, which will be the social centre for the students, containing reading rooms, dining rooms and offices for student activities, a gymnasium, swimming pool, and many other conveniences for the use of the students. This building has already been provided for by a fund of over $100,000, which has been raised by the alumni. Directly in the rear of this will be the athletic field, with a quarter mile cinder track and a concrete stadium to hold at least ten thousand people. Located at convenient places around the field and gym will be the dormitories and some of the fraternity houses.

Two Years to Complete.

The following fraternities have already communicated to President Maclaurin their intentions of taking ground on the new site, on which to erect their houses: Alpha Tau Amega, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Delta Tau Delta, Kappa Theta, Lambda Phi, Phi Gamma Delta, Phi Kappa Sigma, Theta Delta Chi, Theta Xi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon. Delta Psi and Delta Upsilon are as yet undecided on the change and they have not given the president any definite information as to their movements.

It has been estimated that it will take at least two years to erect any one of the buildings for the new Technology, so that considerable time would necessarily elapse before the institute could really move, even though the site should be selected in the very near future.

DOG SHOW IS OPENED TO-DAY

The New England Kennel Club's annual dog show opened to-day in Mechanics Hall with more than 800 dogs benched. This show has brought together the cream of the kennel world in this country and in every class the competition is keen.

With the opening of the doors a good attendance was assured, and judging of the several breeds began promptly at 11 o'clock.

Society always looks with favor upon this show. The biggest event in this section, and this evening and the succeeding days will see many of the fashionable set out to watch the judging, and it is more than probable that several good sales of the show dogs will be made.

Mrs. Arnold Lawson, Mrs. A. Henry Higginson, Jr., Miss Mary Winthrop of New York, Mrs. J. L. Frothingham, Thomas W. Lawson, Robert Jordan, and Mrs. Frances P. Kendall are among the prominent exhibitors of the blue blooded dogs.

One of the features of the show is the exhibit of Esquimau dogs. Dividing honors with these dogs are several Russian wolfhounds.

Many of the dogs shown are out for championship honors, having won at recent shows throughout the country and now seek the four points necessary for a championship.

The Dreamwold kennels at Scituate, owned by T. W. Lawson, have a couple of bulldogs that have yet to meet defeat, and they found themselves to-day pitted against the pick of the land.

The Boston terriers are in the lead regarding numbers. More of this breed are being shown than any other.

Y. M. C. A. MAKES ANNUAL REPORT

The annual report of the Boston Young Men's Christian Association has been published and covers the year 1910. The central building of the association was almost destroyed by fire on January 13 that year and the report states that in spite of that calamity the loss in membership was only 542. The year closed with a membership of 5,194. Regarding a new building the report says:

"The new building committee, on the authority of the board of directors, has applied all income and receipts from building subscriptions to December 31, 1910, to the purchase of the new site on Huntington avenue and the care of the property on Arlington street, which is to be sold. The balance has been invested until needed for the erection of the buildings, one of which is now being constructed. A full financial statement will be rendered in a subsequent report."

BELMONT TO HAVE A PARK

The town of Belmont is to have a park. It will have a lagoon, swimming pool and a complete set of playground buildings. All this is the gift of Harry O. Underwood, a millionaire resident in the town. He is giving this to the town because by so doing he will prevent the erection of unsightly car barns by the Boston Elevated on a lot of land adjoining his estate.

Recently Mr. Underwood learned that the Elevated was trying to buy the piece of land next to his home. He also learned that the road intended building car barns there after the purchase was made. While the road and the owner were dickering over the price, Mr. Underwood stepped in and bought it.

He didn't really want that piece of land and he certainly did not want the car barns. With the land on his hands, the question came up in his mind as to what should be done with it. He then thought out the park plan. In this he was aided by his brother, Loring Underwood, a landscape architect.

When the park is finished it will be turned over to the park commissioners of the town of Belmont. Loring Underwood is chairman of that board. The restriction placed on the land is that nothing shall be built on a ten-foot strip immediately adjoining the Underwood estate. The strip is to be planted with a thick hedge of shrubbery to shut out the view to the Underwood grounds.

HIGH LIFE FOR HETTY GREEN

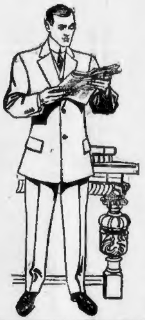
NEW YORK, April 11.—More high life for Hetty Green, the woman of something like $40,000,000.

No more Hoboken for her. The little flat over there will be closed May 1, the regular moving day, when her lease will be up, and Mrs. Green, it is understood, will take up her life with her son, the large and mighty Colonel Edward H. Green, who jumped from Texas to the Waldorf a year ago.

No one will undertake to say how long Mrs. Green will remain at the Waldorf. For there were predictions when she moved into the Plaza, a little over a year ago, that she had thrown economy and simple life to the winds. She had done nothing of the kind. High life palled on her and she went back to the dark and sombre Hoboken flat for another year.

But Colonel Green is a large and hearty man who can't be hid under a bushel nor in a Hoboken flat, and he insisted on seeing some of the good things of life when he came to take up his residence in New York. Already Mrs. Green has spent several days at the Waldorf with her son and she seemed to like the life there well enough to take it up.

Maybe one cause of the change of mind is the fact that she was taken the other day with indigestion, from which she is yet suffering. Whether it was the cooking in the Hoboken flat or some other place that brought on the illness is not known, but the report of her decision to change homes followed closely upon the attack.



TO THE MAN BUYING A SUIT FOR EASTER
—KENNEDY

THE quicker I sell a suit to a man, the quicker I make him a Kennedy booster for life. I want to sell a suit to every live one in Boston between now and next Saturday night at 10 o'clock. The fact that I did a business last week bigger than that of any other clothing store in Boston is no accident. My reputation as a clothing man—selling the very highest grade clothes on earth at a saving of $5 a suit over any other dealer's price—is responsible for the big business I am doing.

I want you to look at a Kuppenheimer—suit (or top coat) from the world's greatest builders of good clothes. You have seen all the others. You have tried all the standard brands—the known, unknown and half-known. I now want you to put a Kuppenheimer suit on your shape and stand in front of a full length glass in the biggest clothing store in Boston and make a decision.

Every accepted style of suit (or top coat) from conservative to extreme and back again—every weave that the mills can produce—every idea that the highest paid brains in designing, cutting, fitting and moulding can put into men's clothes—will be found here—Kennedy's leaders in right clothing.

TO TEST MILK AT HARVARD

No more skimmed milk for the tender Harvard boys who dine at Memorial or Randall, the two big dining halls at the University. Hereafter all milk is to be inspected and pasteurized before being served to the students. This is the result of the charge made by W. A. Graustein, the Boston dairy man, before a committee of the Legislature that Harvard men were being fed on skimmed milk. The Harvard authorities strenuously denied any such condition of affairs.

In order to put the milk served at Harvard above suspicion, Dr. M. J. Rosenau, of the Harvard Medical School, offered to inspect and pasteurize all milk used at the Harvard halls. This offer has been accepted by the Harvard men.

At Randall Hall, where everything is sold a la carte, this will probably mean that the price of milk will go up, and with it a Harvard protest against the increased cost of living. It may end with the less wealthy students substituting water for milk, and perhaps going without their regular heavy evening meal of crackers and milk.

At Memorial Hall, however, board is on the American plan, students being boarded for a flat rate of $5.25 per week. At the present time large pitchers of milk are kept on the tables, but under the new system milk will only be served when asked for and then in individual glasses, thus preventing waste, this saving being made necessary by the increased cost which will necessarily be brought about by the inspection and pasteurization of the milk.

PRINCE HENRY TRIES GRAND DUKE'S AIRSHIP

DARMSTADT, Germany, April 11.—Prince Henry of Prussia was a passenger with August Euler in a new aeroplane invented by the Grand Duke of Hesse. The machine is reported to be remarkably fast.

THIS SHAMPOO BEST FOR HOME USE

"Soaps and most ready-prepared shampoos are ruinous to the hair," writes Mae Martyn in the Los Angeles Herald, "as they contain alkali which is responsible for scalp troubles and dull, scanty, falling, brittle hair—ofttimes mistakably attributed to wearing false hair.

"For restoring the natural gloss and fluffiness to dull, stringy, scant hair there is nothing to compare with a shampoo made by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. It makes a creamy, cleansing lather that removes every particle of dirt, dandruff and excess oil from the scalp and stops itching. It rinses off easily and dries in just a few minutes.

"This peculiar shampoo gives to the hair a most pleasing richness and fluffiness, and will have the commendation of every woman troubled with scanty, short, brittle or faded hair who uses it."

EAST BOSTON'S FUTURE SHOWN

The display by the East Boston Company of bird's-eye views and maps relating to the proposed improvements along the East Boston waterfront at the Greater Boston Real Estate and Ideal Homes Exposition in Horticultural Hall is receiving extra attention from the large crowds visiting this exhibition, owing to the bill reported in the Senate by Senator Tinkham releasing the $3,000,000 appropriated last year for developing the East Boston waterfront. The exhibit of the East Boston Company includes complete illustrations and data concerning these improvements.

Although the ideal home is proving a big feature of the show, the lectures by Arthur E. Horton, expert landscape designer, on agriculture, gardening and landscape designing are proving of special interest to many, particularly those from out of town. Mr. Horton speaks on various topics each afternoon and evening. This afternoon and evening he speaks on "Washington, the Most Scientific Farmer and Greatest Exponent of Country Life in all History."

TWO KILLED IN FEUD OF CLANS

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 11.—The call to arms has been sounded through "Bloody Breathitt" county. Feud clans are gathering along Troublesome Creek near the Perry county line. Two are dead as a result of the fighting so far. They are James Deaton and his brother-in-law, Luke Begley, who died to-day from his wounds.

Both were shot by "Devil Anse" White, who was himself badly wounded, although from his barricaded cabin he is directing his clan against the hostile Deatons. The authorities have sent a posse into the mountains to try to arrest "Devil Anse." Deaton and White, who were formerly close friends, fell out during the Hargis-Cockrill feud, in which there were several assassinations. They have been bitter enemies ever since, and at the outbreak of open war the families of the two men and their relatives took up arms for a bloody conflict.

White is a brother of Tom White, who is serving a life term for the murder of Attorney James Marcum. He is known as a dangerous man, and one of exceptional bravery. Deaton and Begley sought him out at his cabin while "looking for trouble," and the shooting started at once. Deaton was killed, but managed to wound White.

ORPHANS' DAY AT WILD WEST

This was Orphans' Day at the 101 Ranch Wild West Show at the Boston Arena, on St. Botolph street. Children from the orphan asylums, the various homes and from the poorer districts of Boston were the guests of the Boston AMERICAN at the Wild West Show this afternoon.

The little ones came in from the suburbs in special cars in charge of their teachers and instructors and those from the nearby South End institutions walked in procession, some of them marching to their own music. Automobiles were provided to bring weak and crippled children through the kindness of benefactors of several of the institutions.

Hundreds more of little ones came singly or in groups, having received their tickets from social and charitable workers who visit the tenements.

George Arlington, general manager of the 101 Ranch, the Miller Brothers, and the management of the Arena took the best of care of the little ones.

Chorus Girls to Help.

Every child occupied a reserved seat from which a perfect view of the Arena was obtained, and during the performance a party of pretty girls who are members of "The Girl in the Train" company at the Colonial Theatre distributed bags of peanuts to the children. The peanuts were the gift of the AMERICAN.

It was the intention to furnish candy also, but some of the asylums asked that the children be not given candy, having in mind that toothache would result in many cases.

The banner delegation came in charge of the Children's Aid Society, a party of 350. The Salvation Army mustered 200 youngsters. The St. Botolph Street Home for Crippled Children came 150 strong. The Willard Settlement House sent 150. The Home for Little Wanderers had 100 children, the Episcopal Church Home of South Boston was 70 strong, and the Denison House contingent numbered 100.

Delegations of from 50 to 100 were present from the Seashore Home, Civic Service House, Farm and Trade School, Boston Industrial Home, South End House, Helping Hand Home of Roxbury, South End Industrial School, Leopold Morse Home, Children's Friend Society, Gwynn Temporary Home, Lincoln House, and School for Social Workers, and many similar institutions.

Special Stunt Planned.

The Miller Brothers instructed their Indians and cowboys to be very careful not to frighten the children by their savage manners, and the shooting episodes were softened so that the youngsters were not alarmed. Many special features likely to amuse the children were added.

Before the performance began the Indian children with the show were brought up into the stands and introduced to the white youngsters. Some of the children were given a ride on the Deadwood coach or on ponies and everything possible to make the afternoon a happy one was done.

There are a score of pretty cowgirls with the show, as well as cowboys, Mexicans, Cossacks, Canadian Mounted Police, and Indians. The wonderful feats of the cowboys with the lassoos, the boomerang throwing, the attack on the Deadwood coach, the round up of cattle and many other features of the Great West, past and present, were demonstrated upon the great sawdust arena for the guests of the Boston AMERICAN.

BUSCH GIVES BEER IN "DRY" KANSAS

ST. LOUIS, April 11.—Adolphus Busch, the wealthy brewer and philanthropist, has arrived in St. Louis after spending the Winter at his estate at Pasadena, Cal. Mr. Busch leaned heavily on the arm of a relative while he was escorted about his grounds here, and during his inspection of the brewery adjacent, but relatives declare he is in good health.

From Hutchinson, Kan., comes the report that his generosity in giving away beer and champagne at the Santa Fe depot there when his special car stopped for a few minutes caused much excitement among the thirsty.

WINS RACE TO BE AT MOTHER'S FUNERAL

BROCKTON, April 11.—Dr. Gilbert A. Chevigny of Butte, Mont., by catching fast express trains from his home city to Brockton, succeeded in reaching this city just in time to attend the funeral of his mother, Mrs. Louis C. Chevigny, who died at her home here Friday night. When Mrs. Chevigny died a telegram was sent at once to the Western physician. He received it shortly before midnight, with but a short time in which to catch an express to Chicago. In that city he secured passage on a fast train to New York, thence to Boston and Brockton.

PHYSICAL CULTURISTS MEET HERE TO-DAY

Representatives from every State in the Union, from Mexico to Canada, who believe in curing the ills of the body and mind by means of physical culture, were in Boston to-day to take part in the physical culture convention, which will extend through the week. The Massachusetts Medical Gymnastic Society, of which Baroness Rose Posse of Boston is president, will tender a reception to the delegates at the Harvard Medical School this evening. The major part of the week's program will take place in the Girls' Normal School.

INSANE PATIENTS KEPT IN HOT WATER BATHS

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., April 11.—William Cavert of Albany, who appeared before Judge Hasbrouck in habeas corpus proceedings brought to obtain his release from the Hudson River State Hospital, told the court that patients were cruelly treated at the hospital by being forced to stay in tubs of hot water. Dr. W. E. Merriam of the hospital staff said Cavert's statement was true, and explained that the water, heated to ninety degrees, was a new, successful cure for excitable patients.

BETTER TONE IN REALTY MARKET

Samuel Price has sold to Abram Golder the three-story and basement double brick house and 1,400 square feet of land at Nos. 16-48 Irving street, near Myrtle street, West End, all assessed for $10,600, of which $4,000 is on the land.

In the South End the brick and frame buildings and 848 square feet of land at No. 10 Corning street, near Washington street, all taxed for $5,500, of which $2,300 is on the land, have been sold by Leo J. Daly et al. to Edward C. Donnelly.

In Dorchester the frame dwelling and 4,610 square feet of land at Nos. 730-732 Washington street, corner of No. 2 Roslin street, all assessed for $10,000, of which $2,800 is on the land, have been purchased by Caroline W. [illegible] from Charles L. Young.

The Workingmen's Building Association has sold to Henry A. Brehaut three lots of land on Topliff street, near Homes avenue, Dorchester, containing 16,141 square feet and taxed for $4,000.

Alfred C. Belcher has sold to Ethel B. Adams the frame house and 5,248 square feet of land at No. 93 Houghton street, near Pope's Hill street, Dorchester, all assessed for $2,800.

Edith Yates has sold to Frank Williams the three-story and basement brick house and 994 square feet of land at No. 7 Greenwich street, near Westminster street, Roxbury, all taxed for $2,900.

Croff & Byrne report the sale for the heirs of Frederick Guild of the estate at Nos. 1,357-1,359-1,361 Columbus avenue, near Heath street, Roxbury. It consists of a three-story brick building in front, a one and one-half-story brick building in the rear and 15,062 square feet of land, with a frontage of 145 feet on the avenue. The whole is taxed for $14,800, $12,800 of which is on the land. The title has passed to-day to Edward Donnelly.

The same firm have sold the frame house and 2,902 square feet of land at No. 771 Shawmut avenue, near Ruggles street, Roxbury. The estate is taxed for $5,700, $2,900 being on the land. Title passes from Francis S. Eaton to Timothy Connors, who buys for a home and to improve.

Bagley & Cline of East Boston have sold for Mrs. Annie Crosbie her estate, No. 67 Marion street, which consists of a two-family frame dwelling and 1,100 square feet of land. The purchaser, Edwin Inajes, buys for investment. The property is assessed for $2,800.

Bagley & Cline have sold for Jennie M. Hoffman her property, No. 93 Trenton street, which consists of 2,500 square feet of land and a two-apartment frame dwelling with all modern conveniences. The purchaser, Miss Katherine T. Flynn, buys for investment. The property is assessed for $4,000.

ACTORS' FUND BURIAL FOR NELLIE BROWNIE

Burial at Mt. Hope cemetery will be provided for Nellie Brownie, the actress, wife of John H. Brownie, by the actors' fund of America. Mrs. Brownie died at the Long Island Hospital and it is through the efforts of Mary A. Meyers, a trained nurse there, and niece of Louise Meyers, who was at the old Boston Museum, that the arrangements were made.

MEXICAN 'QUAKE DID MUCH DAMAGE

TUCSON, April 11.—According to passengers arriving by train from the west coast of Mexico the earthquake shock which occurred in the state of Sinaloa last Friday did much damage and injured a number of persons. In Mazatlan many buildings collapsed.

DEMOCRATS TO AID THE FARMER

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The House Democrats will caucus to-night to decide on their legislative program for the session. If the caucus decides to accept the recommendations made by the majority of the Ways and Means Committee, the Canadian reciprocity bill will be submitted and passed in advance of any other tariff legislation.

The day after the Canadian reciprocity bill is reported the majority of the Ways and Means Committee, according to the plans submitted to the caucus to-night, will offer a bill lowering duties on agricultural implements and on supplies which the farmer is obliged to buy. There will be about a hundred articles in this bill.

The items will be taken from a number of schedules and will include boots, shoes, reapers, plows, harness and saddlery, harvesters' twine, bagging and many other articles that draw upon the farmers' pocketbook. It was originally planned to attempt a revision of the woolen schedule, but the Democratic leaders have decided to recommend the introduction of a sort of "companion piece" to the Canadian reciprocity bill. This is designed to compensate the farmer for the concessions he is supposed to make under the reciprocity pact.

BRYCE ANNOYED BY WASHINGTON CLUB

WASHINGTON, April 11.—James Bryce, the British ambassador, is not so popular with the members of Capital society as he has been in the past. The reason is that he has headed a protest against the newest and most exclusive club, the Playhouse. Consequently, although every member is a person of wealth and position, the club is threatened with disruption on account of financial difficulties. New members are hard to obtain.

The noise of dance and song and the calling of carriages in the small hours of the morning seriously annoyed the envoy of King George, whose embassy is across the street from the Playhouse. Mrs. Bryce, her friends say, was obliged to leave town for quiet.

MISS ALYS MEYER REPORTED ENGAGED

A report that Miss Alys Meyer, daughter of Secretary of the Navy George von L. Meyer of Boston, is about to announce her engagement, comes from Washington to-day. It is said that Ensign Willing Spencer is the man who has won her hand. Society at the Capital is awaiting the announcement.

The Washington dispatch says that Miss Meyer and the young naval officer have been seen in each other's company much of late and have attended many social gatherings together.

COUNCIL HEARS GRAFT CHARGES

Charges that the city has paid dearly in the lives of its citizens for incompetence in the Building Department and that graft is prevalent there, kept the Council busy until late last night. These accusations were made by Councillor James M. Curley and they were augmented by Councillor Ernest E. Smith of Ward 11, who suggested that the Bath Department is not conducted honestly. The Law Department is to-day preparing an opinion as to the Council's power to investigate.

"The conduct of the Building Department," asserted Councilman Curley, "is becoming a scandal. It is due largely to the inefficiency of the department that the number of deaths from gas poisoning in this city is growing to be as large as the number of deaths from measles. The law is repeatedly violated. The installation of defective gas fixtures is approved and men employed in the Building Department are directly interested in devices for gas fixtures and plumbing traps.

Employes Hold Patents.

"One man in the department has a patent on a trap for a drinking fountain and automobile cesspool. Another has a patent on a plumbing trap. Any man who will install the devices which these men control may install any kind of plumbing, no matter how defective. The inspection service should be honest. The rule of the department to-day is to protect incompetents and to shift those who are honest."

Councilman Curley declared that he believed Commissioner Everett to be an honest man but "he ought to have his eyesight tested."

Councilman Smith's accusations against the Bath Department involve Joseph A. Maynard, president of the Democratic City Committee. He declared that an inquiry should be made into the manner in which bids had been rejected for the commission of the old Ward 8 wardroom in Blossom street into a public bath.

Specifications for this work, he asserted, were so changed as to make it impossible for any one but the Webb Company, by whom Mr. Maynard is employed, to present a successful bid for the installation of shower baths.

A Political Co-incidence.

He thought it might be merely a coincidence that Superintendent Hugh C. Magrath and Mr. Maynard are both lieutenants of Martin Lomasney, but he demanded an investigation. His order was eventually referred to the executive committee.

There was lively debate over both Curley's and Smith's charges, as there was also over the proposal to allow the Boston Elevated to carry freight, baggage, express and newspapers. It was finally voted to give the Elevated leave to withdraw its petition.

Despite the Finance Commission's recommendation for delay the matter of appropriating $800,000 for an office annex to the City Hall on the site of the old courthouse, the Council passed the appropriation by a unanimous vote. Councilman Smith's order asking the Finance Commission to make a study of the "Somers system" as assessing now in use in Cleveland, with a view to its introduction here, was also passed.

Passengers arriving by the Leland liner Devonian reported sighting a mammoth iceburg more than half a mile long and hundreds of feet high last Thursday. Some of the passengers thought they could see polar bears among the craggy pinnacles.

FRANCE LOANS BOSTON CURATOR

The acquisition of Jean Guiffrey, assistant curator of paintings at the Louvre in Paris as curator and the raising of a $200,000 fund to enable him to reorganize the department of paintings at the Museum of Fine Arts in this city, has been announced by the directors of that institution. The appointment of M. Guiffrey is regarded as one of the most important advance steps taken by the officials of the institution for its heads of departments men recognized throughout the world as authorities in their branches of art.

Will Aid American Art.

M. Guiffrey has been loaned to the Museum for a term of three years by the French government on the representation of the Museum authorities that his services as curator would lead to a better mutual appreciation of French art in the United States and of American art in France. The new curator consented to come and reorganize the department of painting on condition that he be given a certain sum of money to spend in purchasing new works. The Museum has accordingly raised, by private subscription, $100,000 a year for two years, which will be used in increasing the collection of paintings.

Mr. Guiffrey's expressed policy will be to devote this money mainly to strengthening the Museum in its department of American art, and of the English art which was its precursor, his theory being that just as the Louvre is the stronghold of French art, so American museums should be strongest in their national art.

John B. Potter, who has heretofore been both curator and keeper of paintings, will continue as keeper of paintings.

Long Service for Art.

Mr. Guiffrey is forty-one years old. He is a graduate of the Ecole de Louvre, which gives the equivalent of a university diploma, and has been for eighteen years connected with the Louvre, as assistant curator in the department of paintings, drawings and engravings. His father was for years director of the Gobelin tapestry works, run by the government.

Mr. Guiffrey leaves Liverpool some time in April for Boston. It is probable he will return in May to attend the sale of M. Pierre Decourcelle at the end of May, a sale of eighteenth century drawings which may help to enrich the Boston Museum. This is his first visit to America.

Quickly Removes Hair From the Skin's Surface

(From Every Day Toilettes)

Many an otherwise beautiful complexion is rendered unsightly by the presence of a downy growth, but this can soon be overcome if a little powdered delatone, the discovery of Dr. Alois von Isokovick, a Russian scientist of great ability, is used.

"To remove superfluous hair," says an authority, "and restore the color to the skin, get an ounce of delatone from your druggist and with some water mix enough into a paste to cover the hairy surface. Let remain two or three minutes, then rub off and wash the skin well and the hairs are gone."

While delatone may be a trifle expensive, it is worth what it costs to get something which actually removes hairy growths.

MISS HELENA MAKES DEBUT

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Edith Helena, touted as the possessor of the most remarkable range, vocal, not kitchen, in the world, made her Boston debut with the Aborn Opera Company last night as "Lucia."

Miss Helena was good, so good that one is tempted at once to compare her with coloratura sopranos who twinkle in the five-dollar companies. For example, she reminds one in voice and apeparance of Frances Alda, although she is not so plump, and her technique, if anything, is better. She possesses a ringing high E, but many of her high notes are thin and shrill. Her mad scene was well studied and made an excellent effect.

Dominico Russi, the tenor, is a veteran of the San Carlo Company. He was allowed to sing in Italian. His voice was strong and not unpleasant, although it had little lyric beauty. Waterous was in excellent voice and the other principals and the chorus sang well.

CRIMSON LOSES FAST SPRINTER

Harvard is due for at least one setback on its track team each year, and it came yesterday afternoon in the form of an injury to D. P. Ranney, the sprinter, the man who, by winning second place in the 220-yard dash against Yale last year, won the meet for the Crimson by a single point.

Ranney pulled a tendon during the Winter running, and yesterday while galloping through a furlong dash at an easy gait repeated the injury.

Ranney was looked to for points in all of the meets this year, and his loss cannot be overestimated to the Crimson.

BOSTON CREWS WILL ROW ANNAPOLIS

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 11.—By closing arrangements with Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Syracuse for races at Annapolis, the Naval Academy has fixed a schedule which will require four big races to be rowed on successive Saturdays. Tech will open the season on April 29, and the University of Pennsylvania will row here on May 6, Columbia will row on May 16 and Syracuse will close the season on May 20. Few college crews have ever undertaken a similar task. The midshipmen have a veteran crew this year, and it is thought here that the hard series of races is not too much for them, particularly as the crew is heavy and older than for a number of years past. The Union Boat Club of Boston probably will send an eight to Annapolis some time in May to row the Academy second crew. The Naval Academy fourth class and Central High School of Philadelphia will row April 22.

ENGLISH HIGH RELAY TEAM FOR BIG MEET

Boston's schoolboy representation at the annual University of Pennsylvania relay carnival at Philadelphia, April 29, will be centred in the crack relay quartet of the local English High School, consisting of Meanix, Ferguson, Howe and Read.

The decision was reached in the matter only recently, when the fact that the school authorities were agreeable to the proposition, and that the necessary funds for the trip would be available through popular subscription by the high school alumni cleared away all possible obstacles.

"AL" ADAMS' SON MUST PAY ALIMONY

SAN FRANCISCO, April 11.—Mrs. Daisy C. K. Adams, who a few days ago divorced Louis B. Adams, whose father was "Al" Adams, New York "policy king," has reached a satisfactory alimony settlement with her erstwhile husband. It was testified by Mrs. Adams in the divorce suit that throughout seven months her husband had habitually returned home at unreasonable hours, bringing home with him noisy boon companions.

DIAMOND DITTIES
A Manager's Request
By DAMON RUNYON

HE looks at me and scowls, and he shows his upper lip;
I know I'm going good, and I haven't made a slip,
But he only growls and says when I loosen up my whip:
"Show me something!"

HE doesn't care a darn how much I had last year
Down yonder in the Sticks, it's what I've got up here;
He only looks at me and he mumbles with a sneer:
"Show me something!"

HE knows my record well—three loss in twenty-four;
You'd think that was enough and it makes me pretty sore
To have him watch awhile and then let out that roar:
"Show me something!"

THE catcher is the same and he yells out of his mask,
No matter how they break he is taking me to task—
And all the gang behind are sure to up and ask:
"Show us something!"

THEY'RE always on my hip, but the manager's the worst:
In the ninth it's just the same as it was back in the first;
No matter what I've got, and no matter how it's cursed:

THOMAS LAWSON WILL SHOW BLACK EAGLE

Entries to the Annual Horse Show at the Park Riding School the week of April 24 are evidence that the horse holds his own in certain lines, despite the advance of the automobile. The entry this year is far ahead of last year in numbers, and in quality there is no chance for comparison. Last year's exhibition was a neighborhood event, while this year there has been especial preparation and the quality of the entry is extremely high.

Class 15 will be one of the events of the show. This is a harness class for mares or geldings, 15 hands 2 inches, or over. This class will mark the first appearance [illegible] of Thomas W. Lawson's acquisition, Glorious Black Eagle. This horse was the star of the sale of the stable of Paul A. Sorg in New York recently, and his appearance in the show ring here will be followed with the greatest interest.

GALWAY-'CHRIS' BARELY LEADING

It was just like putting four aces together and drawing two cards to find what would come out as to determine in the first block of ten strings which was the better bowlers, Christopher and Galway, or Marter and Poehler. This will mean that Miah Murray's alleys will be filled to overflowing to-night by the crowd wanting to see the final ten strings of the big bowling match rolled.

Never in the history of match bowling was excitement more intense and the contestants more evenly match as in the strings decided at Jack Sheafe's Boylston alleys. First one side was leading, only to have the other jump to the front in a few frames.

This was how matters ran along to the sixth string, when Christopher getting in a whopping string of 152 and Galway 97, combined with Martel rolling 92 and Poehler only 81, placed the first two named 48 pins to the good.

This vantage was not overcome till the ninth box in the tenth string, when Poehler pulled his side two pins in the lead. Galway, by making a spare in the tenth frame, then won the honors for himself and partner by the bare margin of four pins, at which point the match will be resumed to-night.

All of the players made some wonderful shots, some being what might well be described as hair raisers. Martel had the toughest luck of the evening with his ball persisting in cutting through. It was a peculiar thing that Christopher got the high score for a string with 152, and the lowest culling for 79, but such is the fortune of bowling.

The match is for a side wager of $500, half of the gate receipts, and the two-man championship of the world. The score:

Christopher—109, 110, 114, 108, 95, 152, 79, 107, 105, 96—1,073.

Galway—121, 85, 84, 126, 104, 97, 106, 93, 93, 94—1,003.

Martell—97, 86, 82, 92, 106, 125, 93, 90, 91, 114, 95—989.

Poehler—121, 136, 106, 110, 103, 81, 124, 85, 105, 112—1,083.

Christopher and Galway	2,076
Martel and Poehler	2,072

SMILES AT HIS HURTS AFTER 30-FOOT FALL

BROCKTON, April 11.—William Reed of No. 296 Ashland street stepped backward into the elevator well in the Brockton-Rand building at Main and Eliot streets and fell thirty feet. Employes of the company telephoned to the police and then rushed with first aid kits to the basement. They found Reed sitting up, rubbing a bruised ankle and smiling. He was taken to the hospital suffering from nothing but a slightly sprained ankle.

LITTLE HOPE FOR SECRETARY OLIN

Little hope is expressed for the recovery of Secretary of State William M. Olin, who has pneumonia. Dr. A. P. Starbird of Dorchester has been in constant attendance since Sunday morning and declares his condition is critical. Mr. Olin has been active in making the Grand Army encampment a success and had made many addresses at the meeting which sapped his strength.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 300,000 more than its next highest competitor and 100,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

COLLEGE ATHLETES AFTER HONORS IN AIR

CHICAGO, April 11. — College aeronautics will be a factor in the University of Chicago athletic schedule this Spring. Members of the University Aero Club have announced that they would go after honors in the air this week, when exhibitions and tryouts will be held at Marshall Field to pick the competitors for laurels in the modern sport. The club will send entrants to the aero meet to be given next month by Harvard at Cambridge, according to the statement of President Harold Kayton of the Aero Club.

EVERETT HIGH HAS GOOD NINE

Everett High School expects to have one of the strongest baseball teams in its history this Spring, in spite of the fact that only four members of the 1910 team returned to school. The new candidates have been working out daily for the last two weeks under Coach O'Donnell, and they are coming along rapidly.

Robert Munroe probably will do most of the pitching this Spring. Munroe has been elected captain of the team, and the coach will find it difficult to develop an outfielder capable of putting up as speedy a game as Munroe did at center a year ago.

The veterans back are George Brickley, Hoyle, Morando and Howard Campbell. The former played second base a year ago, but has been at shortstop of late and the coach may keep him there. Morando is still out of the game with a bad knee, but he is expected back any day and he probably will be at third base, Hoyle will care for first base and Campbell will play right field.

The schedule arranged by Arthur S. Harding, '12, contains twenty-two games, the first of which will be played with the alumni on Saturday afternoon on the new athletic field. Three games are listed each with Malden, Medford, Somerville and Melrose. The schedule:

April 8—Alumni at Everett.
April 12—Stoneham high at Everett.
April 15—Boston Latin at Everett.
*April 19—Medford high at Everett (a. m.)
*April 22—Melrose at Everett.
April 26—Arlington high at Everett.
*April 29—Somerville high at Everett.
May 3—Boston College High at Everett.

ABE ATTELL IS A HIT ON STAGE

Little Abe Attell is a resident of the cultured Hub for one week, that being the extent of his engagement at the Howard, where he is passing over the footlights a line of monologue that is very catchy with the patrons who are flocking to see the gamest fighter of the age.

This term of gameness is qualified with the version of those who witnessed him struggle along with his right arm helpless in the bout with Frankie Burns last week in New York. In the fifth round the arm went clear to the bad, and while his backers and hordes of friends about the ringside called to have the affair stopped, yet Abe wouldn't listen to it, but kept plugging along till in a whirlwind finish in the ninth and tenth he fought to a verdict of winner.

So good a judge of boxing as Kid McCoy declared that in his twenty years experience in pugilism he had never before seen such an exhibition of cleverness, gameness and ring strategy.

In the same way Attell is making good on the stage. He says that he is bound to be out of the ring for six months, by that time hoping that his arm will be strong again and he will be in shape to take on the top-lights in his class. He is booked for forty weeks along the theatre circuit, which, as he says, will keep the wolf from the door.

Right off the reel he made a strong hit. Entering the stage he appeared like a matinee idol of many years experience. Then his sketch. Smooth as oil—and funny. That one he tells about registering at a hotel—just hear it—that's all.

TO BOX IN BUFFALO.

BUFFALO, April 11.—The International Athletic Club of this city has booked a bout between Jack Dillon of Indianapolis and George Chip of Pittsburg, to take place before the club members a week from tomorrow evening.

New Vitality for Men Use the Free Coupon

There is today no excuse for any man remaining weak. The vital man is admired by all men as well as all women; there is an influence about him no one can resist; he knows no fear; he knows no weakness; he knows no result of debility. It is this same VITALITY which carries our young soldiers to war without thought of death. Vitality, reader, is what you MUST have if you would enjoy all there is for you in a life of health and strength. I can give you this same life and vitality; if I can do for you what I am doing for thousands of others I can put the strength of youth into your blood and nerves; I can make you feel young again and keep you feeling young; I can drive away all debility, weakness and despondency. You will laugh at trouble, you will tackle obstacles with the vim to win, just as all other hearty, vital men may do. I don't ask you to use drugs. I ask no change in your present mode of living; just cease all dissipation and then use my HEALTH BELT. All else will come. My Health Belt with suspensory attachment is the greatest nature cure and VITALITY supply that the world has ever known or probably ever will know. Nothing is taken for granted; you feel better immediately, at once, from the first time used. Worn all night while you sleep, it pours a great stream of Vitality and energy into your weakened system; it is a wonder working giant of power; made as I now make it, I am getting results of which no man ever dreamed. Just think, over ten thousand men applied to me during the month of February; I am now sending great shipments of my Health Belt to every part of the civilized world. There is a reason; I am curing; am giving men back their lost strength. It makes you feel ambitious, full of vim; you awaken mornings sparkling with bright, clear-eyed, clear-brained health; the weakness has all disappeared from your back; you are "just feeling fine." Special attachments to my Health Belt cure rheumatism, kidney, liver and stomach trouble.

Let Me Send You This Book FREE

Fill in the coupon; let me send you at once my free booklet in plain sealed envelope; it is profusely illustrated with half-tone photos; keep it in your pocket for easy reference; read the chapter on Vitality; read the chapter on Debility. RED SOX OPEN BOSTON SEASON stand and bleachers, burned several weeks ago, have been rebuilt."

News of a similar kind came this afternoon from National League headquarters in this city for the opening game between Boston and Brooklyn to-morrow at the Walpole street grounds.

Yesterday both squads of Red Sox players, who have been barnstorming their way across country from California, met in Chicago for the first time in about five weeks. Manager Donovan has been returning home with the most of the Regulars by way of Texas and the southern route, while Treasurer Hugh McBreen and the Colts have been campaigning over the Rocky Mountain States—Utah, Nevada, Colorado, Nebraska and others.

It was a happy reunion in the Chicago station when forty-one players and twenty or more managers, treasurers, secretaries, newspaper men and supernumeraries got together.

For a few moments it looked as if Chicago's native sons were returning to their home city. But it was only a few minutes, then there was a quick hustling of baggage from one special to another, and a dozen players from the Colts were shot over to the Regulars and some of the Regulars squad transferred to the Colts, and the trains were away again.

Red Sox Lineup.

Joe Wood, who is the angel child of the pitching staff this year and who is likely to lead the league, will open the season in Washington. Tommy Madden, who is holding him better than any other catcher and who works the signals wonderfully well with him, is scheduled to catch.

The Regulars squad, which left Chicago for Washington direct, will be augmented by Manager Donovan, Tris Speaker, who has been in Boston getting his tonsils snipped, Riggert, who has been selected from the Colts by Manager Donovan for utility outfielder, Yerkes the whirlwind utility shortstop and inneider, and Nebinger, a promising infilder on whom Donovan wants to get a better line of dope. The outfit will leave for Boston to-night directly after the game.

The Regulars will put in to-day practicing on the Fordham College grounds at Washington, Secretary Cooper having made arrangements for the team to use the diamond there:

The batting order for the Washington game is Gardner, 2b.; Hooper, r.f.; Speaker, c.f.; Lewis, l.f.; Wagner, s.s.; Engle, 3b.; Williams, 1b.; Madden, c.; Wood, p.

The playing of Engle at third as the regular player there has met with considerable approbation from the critics along with the Red Sox on their tour. Engle has certainly shown up strong both at bat and in the field. Williams, too, has made a hit at first. He has gone at the position as if he were going to eat it up. He is not such a heavy batter as Bradley, but he certainly does go over a lot of ground.

Whether Donovan will keep him in that position after Bradley's knees recover is a question he will not answer.

Bradley Is Unfortunate.

At the end of the much debated coast-to-coast tour it may be well to summarize the results. Wood and Cicotte are putting up a better game and are in better shape than ever before. Karger and Collins are the next pair in line as pitchers, and the trip has certainly put them in form better than any Hot Springs trip they ever took. Engle has put up a better game than in former years. The old-timers have trained down harder than is usual and ought to play better ball. Certainly Kleinow is putting up a great catching game. His wing is whipping them down to second as never before. Carrigan's thumb has set him back, but he will recover in a little while.

Bradley has been the most unfortunate fall guy of the trip. He gave a conductor a $5 gold piece for a nickel, sat down on the calabass which he had nicely colored, lost his favorite bed and finally smashed up his knee so he was out of the running for the rest of the trip.

Arrelanes has a hard time getting his blood cooled down and has been suffering from boils, but begins to look good. Charlie Hall didn't take the training in California very seriously for a while, but he has begun to wake up now that he has heard that some of the old pitchers have got to get busy if they want to stick. Frank Smith, up to a few days ago, was in excellent trim, but got a little Missouri fog in his arm and has been out of it since.

Several of the boys have suffered "Charley Horse" from wet grounds. Engle, Williams, Hooper, Wagner and Madden were the most sorely afflicted, but seem to have gotten over most of their troubles.

Of the discoveries of the trip, Riggert for outfield and Yerker for infield, look the best to me, and I think to Patsy Donovan, too. I would mention Mahoney and Perry for outfield and Janvrin, Nebinger and Myers for infield. Of the pitchers Killilay and Pape seem to be most considered by Donovan, though Moser is well thought of and will get a good show when he gets strengthened up from a long and severe illness.

Buck O'Brien, the Brockton twirler, and Martin McHale, the young star from University of Maine, who is a Boston boy, by the way, are certainly good ball players and they will be given all the opportunity possible. One good catcher was dug up on the trip and he is Nunamaker. Les is a Nebraska youngster and weighs about as much as a harvesting machine. His arm is the finest throwing arm I ever saw and he will wallop the ball occasionally for long drives. Donovan needs him.

Old friend Thoney is getting in the finest physical condition and has his eye in trim for pitch hitting. Billy Purtell has been doing some great work coaching the youngsters into line. Both Thoney and Purtell have been suffering from bad arms all trip, however, and haven't played much to speak of.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

Pitchers for Boston in To-day's Games

Parson, on the left, was selected to pitch for the Rustlers in this afternoon's game with Yale at New Haven. Bedient is one of the new Red Sox twirlers and was picked to pitch against Harvard at the Huntington Avenue Grounds this afternoon, being the first choice to open the game.

RUSTLERS COME HOME TO OPEN THE SEASON

By R. W. LARDNER.

They are home again. The larger, if not the more important part of the Boston Rustlers' squad reached its own preserves this forenoon and was glad to get here. The bunch came in charge of Secretary Peter Kelley, who was obliged to reach Boston a day ahead of the season's opening to make preparations to handle the crowd that is expected to invade the South End grounds to-morrow to see Fred Tenny's improved team in its first battle against William Dahlen's Dodgers.

There were nineteen ball players in Kelley's charge. The parting with the Regulars took place at the North Philadelphia station last night. The first team, with Manager Tenney and Trainer Jimmie Neary at the head, spent the night at the Hotel Somerset, in New York, and planned to take a morning train for New Haven, a game being booked with the Yale University team this afternoon. This contest had the new Boston directors as spectators. The Yanigans had an engagement at Lynn and thirteen of them were down for the short trip.

Speaking of Burke, it appears that the deal involving hi mis not really complete. Catcher Bridges reported at Baltimore yesterday and was taken to New York with the Regulars. If he fails to live up to advance notices the trade may be called off.

However, the chances are that it will go through and that Mr. Burke will join the Montreal club before the start of the Eastern League season.

Pfeifer, Goode, Graveston, Tyler, Perdue, Evans, Curtis and Carl Mattern were the pitchers brought home. Besides Burke and McTigue, Cliff Curtis had the good fortune to be asked to pitch the final game against the Baltimore club, and were not required to make the journey to New Haven. He and the others not used in the exhibition at Lynn expected to visit the South End grounds this afternoon and look around.

Pitchers Al. Mattern, Frock, Brown and Parson remained with the Regulars.

Opening for Buster Brown.

Buster Brown is second choice for the opening to-morrow, and Al Mattern still ruling favorite. Graham may be used behind the bat whether he has signed or not, as the laws of the game allow a little leeway. But chances are that Peaches will come to some understanding with the powers before he dons the armor for the real strife.

The Boston Yanigans will return from Lynn this evening and the Regulars will come in from New Haven as soon as they can get here. The entire squad will be housed to-night at the Thorndike, and their standing as guests of the owners will not end until to-morrow. President Tom Lynch of the National League was expected some time to-day. He will honor the great occasion with his presence and will be one of many important guests.

The Dodgers will face a team that is just right physically. It is doubtful if any Boston club ever came through a Spring trip in better condition. On the whole, the weather has been very kind and no one in the party has any fault to find with it. A few cold days here can be expected, but Manager Tenney will be satisfied if this weather is fit for baseball. Bill Dahlen's Dodgers are billed to perform at Lawrence this afternoon. They will return to Boston this evening and will be housed at the Copley Square.

Rustlers Had to Work.

Baltimore provided an ideal day for the second game between the Orioles and Rustlers, and Manager Tenney had his men out on the field unusually early to take advantage of the practice and the warm sun. Jack Dunn's flock gave us the hottest kind of a battle and it took all kinds of ball playing by the Rustlers to pull out by a score of 4 to 3. Curtis and Rube Vickers did the pitching, and honors would have been all with Cliff but for Baltimore's good luck.

Mr. Herzog showed a strange lack of civic pride in the first inning by cracking a long triple between left and centre. This was followed by Miller's double, Ingerton's three bagger and an error, and the round yielded three runs. The Orioles got one in the second on Harris scratch single, his theft of second and Egan's double. Tenney cracked open the fourth with a double to left, moved to third on Rariden's out and came in when Seymour, dropped Curtis's long fly.

The Birds grabbed off two in the fifth on two scratch hits by Meisel and Rath, a clean single by Seymour and Herzog's fumble of Heitmuller's grounder. The Wildness of Mr. Curtis kept him in hot water and the Orioles had all kinds of luck, but Cliff had the happiest faculty of tightening up in the pinches and the Birds saw chance after chance slip by. Vickers had the Rustlers guessing after the fourth, so its just as well that Curtis escaped the fruits of his shakiness.

N. E. LEAGUE PICK OUT THE UMPIRES

The New England Baseball League held its Spring meeting at the American House in this city, with President T. H. Murnane in the chair and the following delegates present: Haverhill, Clohecy; Lawrence, Sullivan; Lynn, Fraser; Lowell, Gray; Worcester, O'Donnell; New Bedford, Strank; Fall River, O'Brien; Brockton, Torphy, by proxy.

The official ball was adopted for one year. On motion of President Clohecy of Haverhill, August 30 was set as the date for the next regular meeting, to close the books after the present ten-year agreement has run out.

The following umpires were announced as secured for the coming season: J. E. Stafford, William Maxwell of Brooklyn, J. G. Walsh of Wilkesbarre and Thomas H. Finn of Holyoke. The meeting was in session less than two hours.

HOLBROOKS ARE OUT WITH A FAST NINE

Manager Barney Megley of the Holbrook team will have a fast nine on the diamond this season. His team will be composed largely of Central Social players. Barney has selected for his team: John Sullivan, Henry Bourbeau, John O'Neill, Kelley and Megley, infield; P. Megley, P. Stack, J. Mack and Clarence Pike, outfielders. Simon and Hurd will do the catching and Peterson of last year's team will do slab duty.

DUKE'S BID FOR WIFE BRINGS "DUEL"

CHICAGO, April 11.—Ritter Petru von Borcea, who calls himself Duke of Ropeza, Austria, makes cane chairs for a living, but he has a lot of papers with enormous seals to bear out his story of noble lineage. He is in America to seek a wife and fortune, and advertised in the papers that he would stand at the foot of Grant's Monument in Lincoln Park wearing a red rose. He asked heiresses to size him up. The Grand Duke Sinia Romanoff of Russia, kinsman of the Czar, is outraged at the Austrian's style of courting and has challenged him to a duel. "Think of a duke parading in a park with a red rose in his lapel!" he said. The cousin of the Czar is only a plain drummer in America.

WHO'S WHO WITH THE RED SOX

No. 20—George Hollis, Outfield.

George Hollis, present? Very well, we will proceed. George is one of those accommodating, handy men you like to have around the house. He can drive a nail, hang a picture, make the furnace give heat, play in the outfield, infield or pitcher's box. It's all one to him. He knows the game, and Boston will surely hitch a rope to him.

First played with Vicksburg, Miss., in 1906; was with Medicine Hat in 1907, Syracuse in 1908 and then with Charleston, Va. He's a lefty, but has been trying out in right field. Favorite sport, changing positions. Chief dissipation, wondering if he would make a good catcher.

WALTER JOHNSON JOINS SENATORS

COFFEYVILLE, Kas., April 11.—Pitcher Walter Johnson, who arrived here Sunday from Washington, started back last night after his disagreement with Manager McAleer of the Washington Americans had been adjusted by telegraph.

He will arrive in time for the opening game. Before leaving he stated that he refused to sign a three and a two years contract, insisted it be for only one year, and that he won his point.

SHORTSTOP SHUGART SHOOTS IN QUARREL

CHICAGO, April 11.—Frank Shugart, former shortstop for the Chicago American baseball club, who helped that team with its pennant in 1900 when the league was organized, shot and wounded Henry Fass, a saloon-keeper, in the left arm, following a quarrel. Shugart, who was considered one of the best shotstops in the country, was arrested and is held on a charge of assault.

BASEBALL NEWS NOTES

Neal Ball, of unassisted triple-play fame, shuns the idea of going out into the Western region to play with the Portland Club of the Pacific Coast League to which team he was sold by the Cleveland Naps. Manager Dunn, of Baltimore, would save the former Yankee this long journey and has wired to the Portland management a flattering offer to permit Ball to play with the Orioles.

Clarke Griffith, manager of the Reds, has tabooed Hot Springs as a training camp. Clarke agrees with Bobby Wallace that the health resort has no charms for him as a conditioner. The Reds may invade Texas next Spring, and San Antonio will probably be their quarters.

The Rustlers have picked up a hustling scout in Billy Hamilton. The sleuth was not on the job long when he picked a youth named Neeley, a big pitcher from Memphis. Hamilton claims that Neeley is a counterpart of Orvie Overall. Then again, he may be a counterfeit.

Al Klawitter, who for a short time last season sported a Giant uniform, is suffering from a broken toe, sustained in a game at New Orleans against the Cleveland Naps. A slashing grounder from George Stovall's bat collided with Klawitter's foot in the second inning. It is expected that the New Orleans pitcher will be ready to work again in ten days.

A new wrinkle in school athletics has been introduced at the Brockton High School. All the players on the baseball team have been put under contract, much on the style of big leaguers. The contract business also related to all other branches of sport at the Brockton institution.

In order to stimulate a keener interest among the Los Angeles and Vernon players of the Pacific Coast League, a bonus of $10,000 is being raised by local enthusiasts, to be divided among the two teams at the close of the season. Sixty-five per cent. of this amount will go to the team finishing highest in the league race.

Although he is making a fine impression in the exhibition games, Barney Schreiber, a recruit southpaw of the Reds, may be turned back to Denver. The latter club is without a left-handed pitcher, and Manager Griffith has been asked to let Schreiber go back to Denver for another season.

George McQuillen, the pitcher acquired by Cincinnati in the deal with Philadelphia, has a brother who promises to break into the big leagues. His name is Earl, and he has been signed by the Eurora Club, of the Wisconsin-Illinois League. Earl is said to possess as much speed and deceptive curves as his older brother.

The metropolis has its attractions for many ball players, who are now pastiming on other teams. Jack Lively, the big recruit right-hander on the Detroit pitching staff, is anxious to make good only for a chance to get to New York and take in the sights there.

President Garry Herrmann, of the Reds, is much peeved over the report that he is eager to trade with the Chicago Cubs. Hermann is even indignant over the matter, as he has been gold-bricked once or twice by the loquacious Charley Murphy.

CARRIE NATION IS DECIDEDLY NOT DEAD

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., April 11.—Reports that Mrs. Carrie Nation, the Kansas saloon smasher, died yesterday are untrue. Doctors at the local sanitarium at which Mrs. Nation is a patient said that her health is better than at any previous time since her arrival and they expect her complete recovery soon.

GALLANT DEFEATED BY NEW YORK BOXER

Nineteen bouts took place last night in the National boxing championships at Mechanics Building and the sport was enjoyed by over 4,000 people. Two New England champions, Gilbert Gallant (125 lbs.) and Edward Flynn (135 lbs.) lost their bouts to two New York boys. While Gallant was looked upon as a coming national champion few thought Flynn had a chance.

Gallant was defeated by F. Hufnagle of the National A. C. of New York, who was given the [illegible] last night [illegible] to attach the title of champion to his name. Hufnagle surprised the large crowd in the way he handled the New England champion. He had a good right hand and landed often on Gallant's jaw and his defense was well planned [illegible] most of Gallant's leads. Gallant was not outclassed by any means and he made a game finish but the New York boy had just enough lead at the end of three rounds for the judges to award him the bout.

Flynn Boxed Like Novice.

Flynn boxed more like a novice than a champion and in his match met Frank Meserve of the Mott Haven A. C. of New York, who showed very little class. Flynn missed often and when he did land his blows were mostly upon the back or the kidneys. Meserve [illegible] lacked the power that makes champions and the other boxers in the class would have little trouble in defeating him for he also lacks the science.

The best bout of the evening was in the 108-pound class between John Crowley of Pawtucket, R. I., and Julius Lesseur of the Union Settlement A. C., New York, who started out like a sure winner, [illegible] the New York boy in the first [illegible] of the first round and it looked as though it was all over for Lesseur. [illegible] strong, knocking Crowley down in the second round, and they went at it hit and heavy, each scoring often. When the second round closed the boys were [illegible]. The third and last round was very [illegible] New York [illegible] would land and then the other, until Crowley began to weaken and the New York lad with a left to the jaw put Crowley down for a knockout. Lesseur, if he boxes as well to-night as he did last night, will give Johnny Fallon, the Roxbury boy who drew a bye, a great fight and the New England champion will have to be at his best to win from the New Yorker.

Carlson Was Clever.

In the 115-pound class Harry Carlson of Brockton, who defeated Nat Albanese of East Boston, showed that he was a very clever boy and could use both hands to great advantage. Carlson scored often with rights and lefts to the [illegible] and right to the body. Carlson was more on his clever work than [illegible] power to hit and he will give the other boys in the 115-pound class a lot of trouble.

Tom Regan, the East Boston lad, won two bouts in the 115 class, defeating first M. Blier of New York and in the second bout he outpointed Ed. Peterson of Roslindale. Regan is clever and ought to give a good account of himself in his bout to-night.

One of the hardest fights of the evening was between Harry Marshall of Somerville, who [illegible] Fessenmayer of New York. The boys were very [illegible] matched and they stood toe to toe and just [illegible] away at each other. Marshall held up to the third round holding Fessenmayer even, but in the last round the New Yorker was the faster and landing on Marshall's jaw [illegible]. Fessenmayer was afterwards defeated by York O'Connor of [illegible] in three rounds, his first bout evidently taking much of the fight out of him.

Hodgdon Scores Knockout.

Ted Hodgdon, the 145-pound N. E. champion, won his bout from [illegible] of Cambridge in the third with a knockout. [illegible] knew little about the game and was easy for Hodgdon. The other bout in the 145 class went to a New York boy, [illegible] Avery, [illegible] who had all he could do in besting Oscar Anderson of the [illegible]. Anderson was game and never gave up trying to land the winning [illegible]. He lacked the steam behind his punches while he had the heart of a [illegible].

J. A. Mansfield of Brookline, the New England 158-pound champion, had the hardest kind of a time winning his bout from Jack Ashton of Pawtucket. Ashton had the Brookline man's left eye closed tight and it looked bad for the champion for a time, but Mansfield scored well in the last round, which gave him the judges' award.

Nat Boutellier, the Boston fireman, as well as boxer, won his bout from J. J. Dorsey of the Irish-American A. C. in the 158-pound class. Dorsey was a big strong boy but Boutellier was a little too clever for him. Another winner in the 158-pound class was Everett Eldridge of Revere, he making F. F. Conway of Somerville look cheap. Conway wanted to quit in the first round but his seconds got him to go out for the second round and that was enough for the Somerville lad as he refused to go out when the bell rang for the third round.

The bouts to-night should be productive of some great boxing. The heavyweights who did not box last night will be a big attraction to-night.

ARMORY WINNER TO BOX COULON

The winner of the Monte Attell-Al Delmont bout at the Armory A. A. to-morrow evening has been promised a match with Johnny Coulon at the same club May [illegible]. This will make both boxers strive harder than ever to score a decisive win before the twelfth round, which is the limit of the contest.

Both Delmont and Attell have been after a match with Coulon for the past year, but a difference in the weight question prevented either of them from securing the match.

Delmont is [illegible] of winning from the [illegible] featherweight [illegible] content with a victory over Monte and is going after Abe for a match at 118 pounds, the weight he recently met Frankie Burns at in New York.

Abe has the greatest [illegible] his brother Monte [illegible] feels that there will not be [illegible] of Delmont [illegible] a match with him after Monte [illegible].

[illegible] of South Boston and Jack [illegible] should result in some fast milling.

FRANK KLAUS HAS FORMALLY claimed the middleweight championship of the world and says he will defend it against all comers. In claiming this title Klaus says that he is entitled to it because of his [illegible] Stanley Ketchel, [illegible] Billy Papke and Hugo Kelly [illegible] in the Smoke City. [illegible] he also [illegible] Harry Lewis in six rounds, [illegible] Porky Flynn and [illegible] Sullivan on points in twelve-round contests, knocked out Frank Mantell in [illegible] rounds, [illegible] Leo Houck in six rounds, [illegible] Willie Lewis and Montana Jack Sullivan in six and three rounds respectively. He says he will make a match with either Sam Langford or [illegible] Johnny Thompson at the 158-pound weight limit as he regards them as his most dangerous rivals. His next opponent will be Jimmy Gardner, who [illegible] a decision over him in twelve rounds and [illegible] he says his right to the [illegible].

WOLGAST, IT IS REPORTED, HAS requested his bout with One Round Hogan to be postponed from April 18 to April 25. The lightweight champion [illegible] his arm in the recent fight with [illegible] in Frisco and says he [illegible]. In view of the fact that Packy McFarland and [illegible] Murphy are matched to box on April 17, Wolgast's request may have been prompted by business reasons.

Boxing Results in Many Clubs

NEW BEDFORD.—Jerry Gaines, the Boston market champion, after a lengthy absence from the ring, was trotted out as an opponent to Billy Farlow of Fall River before the New Bedford A. C. Farlow after two decisive victories before the club was regarded as a comer, but Gaines administered a crushing blow to his future aspirations by putting him out in the first round. In the first preliminary Harold Walker, late of Lancashire, Eng., defeated Young Wolgast of Boston. "Chicken" Rossin of this city won from Kid Chester on points after a lively eight-round encounter.

PHILADELPHIA.—Mike Glover of Boston beat Harry Ramsey in six rounds at the American A. C. Jack O'Brien was referee. Glover hit Ramsey when and where he pleased after the second round, and it was only Ramsey's ring generalship that saved him from a knockout.

LONDON.—Before the National Sporting Club Eddie McGoorty of Oshkosh, Wis., won a fifteen-round middleweight contest from Pat O'Keefe, welterweight champion of Ireland, on points.

Desperate Desmond

THE LOVERS MUST DIE BEFORE THEY REACH THE OTHER BANK I WILL EXPLODE THE MINES IN THE RIVER
MINE CONTROL STATION
LOOKS LIKE MINES, ROSAMOND WE ARE IN DANGER MY DARLING
SAVED BY THE HARD SHELLED TURTLES NEAR THE EXPLOSION
I AM SURE DESMOND TRIED TO HARM U. BUT HE IS FOILED
CURSES! THE EXPLOSION DID NOT TOUCH THEM. THEY MUST NOT ESCAPE ME
NOW TO LIGHT THIS FIRE AND SIGNAL MY TRUSTY MEN ON THE OTHER BANK, HA, HA
OH
HORRORS! DESMOND'S WILD MEN. WE ARE LOST, BUT THE CUR WILL PAY FOR THIS.
HERSHFIELD

The villain is about to touch off the submarine mines which are planted in the river, and you may be sure he is doing it for no good motive. He wants to blow up Claude and Rosamond, who are swimming across the stream to escape his clutches. Every time they get away from him it only makes him so much more determined to get them.

Claude and Rosamond see the mines, but they have no idea that Desmond has it in his power to explode them. And it's just as well they do not know, for they could not stop him anyhow, and there's no use worrying over what you cannot prevent. Death itself is not half so terrible as the fear which it inspires in us.

We really thought Desmond had them this time, but how could we know that a flock of turtles was going to happen along just as the explosion took place? These Borneo turtles have extremely hard shells; they'd make a hunk of harveyized steel look like a plate of mush. Consequently, the explosion does not faze him in the least.

Here is Desmond watching to see the mangled remains of Claude and Rosamond go soaring through the air. Instead of that, he sees the lovers riding calmly away on the back of a giant turtle. To say that the villain is disappointed is to express it very mildly. In fact, he is madder than the proverbial wet hen.

No doubt you are curious to know why Desmond is kindling that fire. We'll tell you. The wild men of Borneo, like most savage tribes, have a system of signalling by fire. The villain is making use of this primitive means of communication to put his savage allies wise to the whereabouts of Claude and Rosamond.

The result is that when the lovers attempt to land they find a large body of wild men waiting to receive them. Their orders are to hold Claude and Rosamond until Desmond arrives, and they look as if they intended to obey orders. What fate is in store for our hero and heroine we do not know as yet, but we'll tell you to-morrow.

The Imported Thoroughbred

He Was a Regal, Prancing Steed Until the Effect of the Dope Wore Off

"THIS dog of mine," said the retired merchant, "was imported from England, and there isn't any finer thing than his."

"He looks like an imitation dog," remarked the hotel keeper. "If you hadn't told me what he was, I'd have mistaken him for some new-fangled kind of door mat.

"Jim Whaley, the blacksmith, has a whole lot better dog, and it was raised right here in this town. I never could see any sense in importing dogs. Patronize home industries, say I.

"A dog from England doesn't make any better wienerwurst than the home product, and yet you come around here all swelled up with false pride and think you're going to make a hit by saying that your doggone bowwow came from England.

"That sort of foolishness might be pardoned in a young man, but a citizen of your age should know that nothing is any better for being imported.

"A British dog has just as much trouble with fleas as any other dog. The only advantage it has is the fact that somebody is apt to poison it to escape being bossed by its owner.

The Imported Horse

"When I was a young man I had an idea that everything that came from a distance was better than the things you get at home. When I was growing my first whiskers I decided that I would blow my hard-earned savings for a horse. I wanted to haul the girls around town in a beautiful buggy with red wheels and make the other young men so envious that they'd take paris green and die.

"My father was one of the wisest men you ever heard of, and he advised me to go to the Red Front livery barn and buy a horse, but I had the idea that a horse was no good unless it was bought a thousand versts away from home.

"So I went to the city with my little wad of money and bought a regular king fisher of a horse at an auction of fine steeds.

"The auctioneer broke down and wept at the idea of selling such a horse to a stranger. The animal had been the boast and the pride of a millionaire, lately deceased, and it had a record and a pedigree a mile and a half long. I was surprised that there was money enough in the United States to buy such an animal.

Led Him Up Main Street

"Well, I brought him home in a freight car, and when I led him up the main street the whole town was out on the sidewalks looking at that regal creature, which pranced along like the star performer at a cakewalk.

"I took him home and then my father came out and looked him over and felt his pulse and looked at his tongue and tapped him with a tuning fork and shook his head in a way that would break your heart.

"'I told you to go to the livery barn to buy a horse,' he said; 'but you thought you knew more than your ancestor, who has been saturating himself with knowledge for fifty years. And what have you done? You've gone and bought an old plug that is doped, and by day after to-morrow you won't be able to give him away to the heathen.'

"Well, sir, that wise old man had the situation sized up exactly right. In a day or two the effects of the tonic were off and that horse looked like a chromo that is suffering for a rustic frame. He carried his head so low he was always stepping on it, and when he laid down you had to summon the neighbors to help lift him by the tail.

"Then and there I made up my mind never to journey into strange countries for things I could buy next door, and I've followed that policy ever since and that's why everybody admires and loves me.

"If you'll take my advice you'd quit bragging about that imported dog of yours and go over to Jim Whaley and try to trade him out of his pup, which is a home product and a credit to his species. And I wish you'd hurry up and do it, for that imported dog of yours looks as though he's going to have a fit."

Polishing Metals

UTENSILS must be kept polished. For copper use soap applied with a damp cloth, then sprinkle thickly with borax, if you have no regular copper polish. Brass can be cleaned by being moistened with kerosene, then rubbed with a paste of powdered chalk and lemon juice, and polished with chamois. Boil tin utensils occasionally in strong soda water, and if rusted rub with lard and let stand before washing.

Advice to the Lovelorn ☘

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HAVE YOU ASKED HER?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man about twenty-four years of age, and deeply in love with a young girl about seventeen. She is a business girl and works in [illegible] and has a great many admirers.

This young lady acts very different toward me at times, which makes me feel deeply grieved. I dearly love her and believe she has some love for me.

Now, Miss Fairfax, as I am in business, and in a position to marry, I would like to know whether you think this young lady has any love for me?

I. L.

HAVE you asked her to marry you? That will be the best and quickest way to find out just how much she cares. Perhaps she is merely trying to pique you and arouse your interest, when she acts indifferently toward you.

WASTING HER TIME

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with a young man for the last ten years. I have learned to love him more than life, and he has told me how much he loved me. But lately his love has been on the wane. He is employed where there are [illegible] more of women. I have heard of his being with them and in fact I've seen him myself. It nearly breaks my heart. I can never live without him; so please help me out.

I will try to follow your advice. He does not like to have me speak to any one. Now do you think he treats me fair?

M. G.

I THINK you are wasting your time. Ten years is too long to wait for him. He is paying attention to other women, and I think you are foolish to allow him to monopolize your time and interest. Tell him that you think you have waited quite long enough and perhaps that will wake him up.

MUCH TOO YOUNG.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man, twenty years old, and am deeply in love with a girl of fifteen. This girl goes to school and I would like to keep company with her.

I have known her for the last five years, and I happen to meet her once a week.

I know, for a fact, that she loves me; but there are two other young men who are about six years older than myself who think a little of her. I am acquainted with her people and they think an awful lot of me. I meet them all in church on Sunday.

Now, Miss Fairfax, I would like your advice if I should ask her mother or is she too young to keep company?

F. A. M.

SHE is just a little girl, and far too young to have her head filled with thoughts of men and "keeping company." Her parents may like you, but I am sure they would disapprove of your wishing to be anything more than a friend to their daughter. Wait until she is a few years older before you pay her any serious attention.

THE GIRL'S PLACE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Would you kindly settle this argument: Is it correct for the young lady to ask the gentleman to call on her at her home, or for the gentleman to ask to call? Wouldn't it put the lady in an embarrassing position if she didn't wish to see him?

V. F. M.

IT is the girl's place to ask the man, though he can very easily let her know that he would like to be asked.

A Lithuanian Maid

By WINIFRED BLACK

SHE is a Lithuanian, she says, and her mother kept boarders, and they all slept huddled in one frowsy room—the family and the boarders.

The little girl went out and picked up coal on the tracks and never had a chance to go to school, and she grew up and met a handsome young "Greenhorn" and married him, and the "Greenhorn" is a good mechanic and makes good wages, and the little Lithuanian has a pretty little house, and she doesn't take boarders, and every bit of coal she has burned in her stove since she was married was bought and paid for.

Also there's a carpet on the floor and there's a bureau and a rocking chair, and she keeps geraniums in the window, does the little Lithuanian who married the "Greenhorn," and she has a tablecloth on the table for supper—it's a good deal of trouble, but she washes it three times a week and it does look so pretty—and she has three four-tined forks, and on Sundays there is something good for dinner, and the "Greenhorn" brings his friends home and seems proud of the Sunday dinner.

But the Lithuanians will not go to see the little wife. They say she is proud and "stuck up," because of the tablecloth and the forks and the carpet and the bureau. The man has many friends. He belongs to three lodges, and the woman has no one and she is very lonely.

"The Americans hardly speak to me either," she says. "I guess it's because my mother comes to see me in her queer Lithuanian clothes. What would you do?

"My husband wants to build a home here and that means settle down for life, and I want to go away somewhere where we won't be known and where I will have a chance."

Well, little Mrs. Greenhorn, let me tell you, you have written the most interesting letter I have had in many a long day.

Go away? Not I.

If I had your ability to write I'd sit down and write some stories, stories that you know, not that you imagine; things that you have seen happen right there in the little Lithuanian village, and send them to the magazines. If you'll send them to me I'll send them somewhere for you, and if they are half as well written and as real as your letter you'll be able to live about anywhere you want to in little or no time.

And then you've only been married a little while. Wait till the children come. They'll soon get into the American ways and into the American home, and you can go right along with them.

Your husband has good work where you are, the little old-fashioned mother you love so dearly and feel so sorry for is here—you don't realize how you'd miss her if you went very far away—and you know and understand there as no strangers would ever know and understand you.

Help your husband with the plans for the new house—get him to build it somewhere near some friends of his, lodge friends who have pleasant wives. Have him ask the wives along to the Sunday dinner too, once in awhile. The wives will like you and see what you are trying to do if they are worth the paring of your finger nail.

Wait a little, be patient, be brave, be good natured, read and write. A poor seamstress has written the great book of the year over in Paris. Why shouldn't you try with your little Lithuanian stories?

And, anyhow, be happy with your handsome "Greenhorn" and with your carpet and your bureau and your rocking chair and your plants. Some day you'll wish you could be as happy over a fine apartment somewhere, fairly loaded down with rocking chairs and carpets, as you are now with the simple, pretty little home.

Youth, hope, love, ambition—my dear, my dear—you are a happy, happy woman. Some day you'll realize it all.

☘ The House With No Address ☘

A Story of Love and Tragedy, by E. Nesbit. Copyright by Doubleday, Page and Company

CHAPTER XI.

Sylvia's Home.

IT was quite dark in the brougham. Sylvia released her lover's hands and reached down to the floor of the carriage. Templar heard a click and suddenly experienced the descending lift sensation.

"It's all right, I tell you," said Sylvia, her hands on his arms; "we're just going down."

They were. Very slowly and gently, as if it were the most natural thing in the world, the whole inside of the motor began to sink through the floor.

It was an ingenious arrangement, as Templar perceived later. Once in the garage, the pressure of a spring released the catch of a trap door, which fell down at the side of what appeared to be a motor pit. Then the floor of this pit rose to meet the underside of the brougham. Another lever controlled and removed two steel rods which supported the carriage in place, and a third lever, worked from within the brougham, started the little lift on its way. They went down into darkness, and stopped with a jerk.

"Open the door," said Sylvia, "or shall I? Can you feel the handle? Now get out."

He got out on to a smooth floor, and her hands came fluttering to him through the dark. They stood together outside the motor brougham.

"Stand well back," she said, and something moved in the darkness. It was the inside of the brougham returning to its normal place in the garage above. They heard it come into position with a soft click.

"Now," she said, "it's safe, and we can turn on the light. Let me."

Her touch on the electric switch brought the light round them. He looked up at the gleam of the steel shaft that stood up from floor to ceiling of the narrow passage in which he found himself.

"How beautifully simple," he said. "So that was how you vanished the night that I saw you home? That's a confession, Sandra—I tried to find out where you lived long before I met you on the river."

"Yes," she said. "Forrester told me. I was horribly frightened at the time. Come, let's get out of this place. It always seems to me like a crypt. I believe it's haunted."

It was rather like a crypt—its roof, except for the square space in which the lift worked, was of old, dark brick, with gray green stone groining and pillars.

"What is it?" he asked, as they went. Both experienced the need to assure themselves that the solid earth still went round in the orthodox way, the need which comes to us all after great crises of life—which makes us shrink at first from vital explanations and enlightenments and talk about the weather or the government—anything trivial rather than about that which has thrilled our souls to the very centres of life.

"It's an underground passage."

"Well, yes," said he, and they laughed.

"There used to be a monastery here—it's part of it. The old Duke of Pentland found it when he made our house. He was always fond of underground you know—and he kept it. He made our house, too—mind your head."

They passed through a low arch in a kitchen, a quite ordinary kitchen; then up a flight of stairs and into the room of middle Victorian souvenirs, she turning up the lights as she went.

"There," she said, dropping her wraps and looking at him, "now we're at home—this is where I live. It's The House With No Address."

"I see," he said. And did, in a measure.

"It's a wonderful place, isn't it? I'll show you all over it."

"Presently," he said. "You ought to rest now. Can't I ring for some wine?"

"There's some in the cabinet," she said and laughed. "I hope this isn't a dream."

"It's very like one," he said, and got the wine. Tall Venice glasses were beside it in the cabinet—and food on fine china covered with fine damask.

"We'll have supper presently," she said, taking the glass from his hand. "You, too—we'll drink each other's healths."

But he was, after all, too conventional a lover to do otherwise than drink from her glass, ostentatiously turning it so that his lips should rest where hers had been.

Then they stood an instant looking at each other.

"How quiet it is here," he said.

"Yes," she said.

Then there was silence again.

"Come," he said briskly, "you must sit down and rest—and let me sit beside you and hold your hand and look at you and get used to the dream. Tell me things. Tell me all about this wonderful house, and how you found it."

She, too, still wanted the relief of words that did not touch the truth that lay between them, the truth that had divided and did now unite.

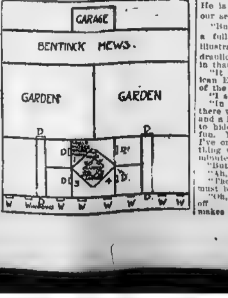
"It was Uncle Mosenthal," she said, and told him of their coming to town.

"His grandfather bought the house a long time ago. He owns the whole of this block. It was that old Duke of Pentland who built ours. He sort of dug out the insides of two of these houses and made our house in the middle, diamond shape, you know—so that nothing shows from the outside. All the windows open into the garden in the middle."

"I don't understand in the least," he said.

"It is difficult; I'll draw it for you, if you've got a bit of paper and a pencil."

She reached for the papier mache blotting book and, his chin on her shoulder as he looked on, drew on a letter from his pocket something like this:



"I see—but surely people must know of this place—the men who mend the roofs and put up telephone wires. . . . ?"

"The telephone men don't notice the shapes of roofs, I suppose—and he has all the repairs done by workmen from his place in the country—brings them up by motor and takes them back every night—the gardener, too—and the woman who does our housework. She's deaf and dumb and very stupid, but she works all right. Oh, it's a wonderful scheme! No one but Uncle Mosenthal could have invented it."

"He must be a wonderful man."

"He is. He is frightfully nice, and he's in all sorts of things. He half owns the theatre and all sorts of companies and things. He calls himself a house agent . . . but I know the King has sent for him . . . for some secret reason or other, and he had to start for Germany last night. He's a wonderful person—and kind! The world's full of people he's been kind to. That deaf and dumb woman, he saved her life in a fire—his own self."

"And your chauffeur—how did you square him?"

The Chauffeur

"Oh—he was one of the village boys I used to know at home—and he went into a motor works, and when Uncle Moses had invented the lift and motor scheme, I thought of him. He made the motor. And he put in the electric light. He is much too fond of me to give away our secret. . . . ."

"But I don't understand how it is that a full account of all this isn't in the illustrated papers every week. The Hydraulic Power people must be interested in that lift."

"It isn't the Hydraulic. It's the American Elevator—there's a tank on the roof of the house the garage is under, and . . ."

"I see."

"In the wicked Lord Pentland's time there was just a trap-door under the stable and a ladder down. They kept straw there to hide the trap-door. It has been such fun. You see, Uncle Moses is next door—I've only got to press that button if anything went wrong—he'd be here in half a minute."

"But he's in Germany . . . ?"

"Ah, but when he's at home?"

"The rooms in the houses next door must be a funny shape."

"Oh, he has the cornery bits boarded off . . . calls them storerooms. That makes it look all right, and of course all the storerooms have windows on the street—And—Oh!"

He had caught her in his arms—almost roughly.

"Why are you wasting our time like this?" he said, holding her. "You could have told me all this when the others were here. Where are they? When will they come in?"

To Be Continued To-morrow.

FRECKLES GONE

"Simple Remedy Removed Them," Says Society Lady.

"The best skin specialists told me that nothing would remove my freckles and that I would carry them to my grave," said a well known society woman, "but I fooled them all with a new drug othine-double strength, which cleared my skin and gave me a fine complexion."

The action of othine is really remarkable, for when applied at night many of the freckles disappear entirely by morning, and the rest have begun to fade. An ounce is usually all that is needed, even for the worst case.

Be sure to ask Houghton & Dutton or Riker-Jaynes Drug Co. for the double strength othine, as this is sold under a guarantee of money back if it fails to remove the freckles.

WHAT I WENT THROUGH

Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Natick, Mass.—"I cannot express what I went through during the change of life before I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in such a nervous condition I could not keep still. My limbs were cold, I had creepy sensations, and I could not sleep nights. I was finally told by two physicians that I also had a tumor. I read one day of the wonderful cures made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it, and it has made me a well woman. My neighbors and friends declare it had worked a miracle for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth its weight in gold for women during this period of life. If it will help others you may publish my letter."—Mrs. NATHAN B. GREATON, 51 N. Main Street, Natick, Mass.

The Change of Life is the most critical period of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lysander John Studies What Wifey Reads

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THERE are so many special services during Lent, attended by women, who carry with them the burdens of the lost souls of their husbands, that Lysander John Appleton has spent many evenings alone in the past six weeks, so many he has become greatly attached to two over-stuffed pillow cushions that are his sole companions. Fat and stupid, they resemble fashionable ladies.

Solitaire, the national game of Lonesome Land, had been forbidden him during Lent, and with a bored air he picked up a magazine.

"This," he said to the cushion ladies, "is my wife's favorite publication. She spends so many hours over it I am sure it must be bright and scintillating. Undoubtedly I will find much here indicative of my wife's unusual mentality."

On the first page there was a picture of a man and a girl; the man was flicking the head off a daisy with his cane, and the girl had turned from him with one hand lifted in a gesture of despair.

"Ha!" said Lysander John. "This looks interesting. I will read about it."

He Looked Surprised

Settling himself more comfortably in his chair, he read the following under the picture:

"With soutache buttons and loops. An attractive garment for country wear."

Lysander John looked surprised, and read again, this time aloud to the pillow cushion ladies; but, being fat and fashionable, their expressions did not change.

"No doubt the Great Uplift thoughts that inspires my wife will be found further in," said Mr. Appleton, and he turned over a dozen pages.

A picture showing two girls walking hastily toward a Summer house, in the door of which lounged a handsome young man holding by a leash an attenuated greyhound, caught Mr. Appleton's eye. In the distance there was a footman with a valise, and a carriage and four, with the driver in his box. It looked like an elopement and Lysander John eagerly read:

"Made of messaline silk, self-trimmed, with buttons a shade darker."

The presence of the pillow cushion ladies alone prevented Lysander John from expressing his opinion of his wife's favorite reading. He turned another page and found a picture of a woman placing a rose on a tomb. Near her were three pretty children, whose attitudes of gaiety proved that grief had not yet touched them.

"Perhaps here," said Lysander John, "is where I will find some of her favorite quotations on motherhood." He read:

"Made of cross barred muslin; a serviceable tub dress for July and August."

Lysander John Gives It Up

Lysander John's sense of humor is overworked, but it was called out again and that alone saved him from sliding to the floor in a fit.

Throwing the magazine at the cushion ladies, he drew a pencil and some envelopes from his pockets, and when his wife came home was busily engaged on his favorite Lenten statistics, trying to prove what greater value, commercially, a man would be, though his soul might not rate so high, if the eggs he is compelled to eat during Lent had been put in an incubator, hatched and sold as fries.

Going or Coming

A TRAIN was reported 40 minutes late and after the time had elapsed a would-be-passenger inquired: "How late is that train?"

"Oh, about an hour late."

The hour passed and the query was repeated.

"Well, they'll be about an hour and 20 minutes late here."

Patience reigned until the query was justly renewed and the railroad man replied. "Well, sir, I think that train will be near two hours late."

Whereupon the passenger said: "Say, mister, will you kindly tell me which way that train is going?"

Things About Women No Man Can Understand ☘ ☘ By DOROTHY DIX

Guessing What a Woman Is Apt to Do

"THE thing that keeps me guessing," said the third man, "is the uncertainty about what a woman will do under any given circumstances. You never can tell whether she will go up in the air, or whether she will sit calmy down and take out her knitting.

"If you know a man, you can make a pretty accurate estimate of the course of action he will pursue in any emergency; but no previous amount of acquaintance with a lady will give you a line on the way she will act at a crisis. On the contrary, she is pretty sure to give you the surprise of your life by doing exactly the thing you would have sworn it wasn't in her to do.

"All of us have seen the familiar phenomenon of a woman who will have hysterics of fright over a mouse, yet look a lion in the eye without the quiver of an eyelid. Well, things like that are always happening with women, and it's what makes marriage such a lottery. A man never knows what sort of qualities his wife has gotten secreted about her person.

"For instance, I had a friend who was married to a regular Fluffy Ruffles sort of a woman, the kind of woman, you know, whose brains seem to be cut on the bias and frilled in the middle, and who are simply mad about clothes and society. By Jove, I used to look at that woman and think that she was nothing on earth but a French doll, with a sawdust heart.

"I pitied poor Brown from the bottom of my soul, and thought that if the time ever came when he couldn't put up all she wanted for millinery and dressmakers I could tell who would hit the first train out for Reno.

"Oh, I tell you she kept poor Brown slaving like a dray horse to supply her senseless extravagance, and at length he struck a snag in business and was just completely wiped out—not a sou markee left.

"Of course, he had never been in the way of talking over his affairs with his fashion plate wife, and she knew nothing of the load he had been carrying and the anxiety he had been suffering; but when the crash came he couldn't keep it from her any longer.

"He's often told me that he went through a perfect purgatory screwing up his courage to break the news to her. She was so pretty, so indulged, so utterly helpless, he couldn't even imagine what she would do without the luxuries to which she had always been accustomed.

"Finally, however, the dread minute could not be put off longer. He had to tell her that they were utterly ruined, that they were paupers, and that he would have to take some small position in order to make bread and butter for them.

"He knew her so well that he felt sure that she would swoon with horror, and overwhelm him with bitter reproaches, but what she said was:

"'Oh, is that all? Don't you worry any more about that. I have always thought I would like to do something useful, and I am going to set up a dressmaking establishment and make a fortune.'

"And she did, and she proved to be the shrewdest, cleverest little business woman you ever saw, and, strangest of all, was perfectly happy.

"And I've seen the reverse of this happen, and an apparently level-headed and sensible woman do unbelievably idiotic things. My wife has a friend, whom I will call Mrs. Blank because that isn't her name, that for years and years had been an oracle in our set. She was a sort of Solomon in petticoats, to whom we all went with our little perplexities, sure of having them smoothed out in the wisest, kindest way.

"Mrs. Blank was a rich widow, who managed her own affairs so cleverly that she had doubled and trebled the money her husband left her. In addition, she was a woman who had seen many phases of life, who was worldly wise, who had perfect poise of character and she was sixty years old; and yet, on a fine day, she married a little snippit of a degenerate college boy, who was such a palpable fortune hunter that a blind woman should have been able to see it.

"And I am daily confronted with amazing contradictions of character in my own wife that keep me gasping with wonder and amazement.

"I have known her to have the same hat sent up and down six different times from a store while she was trying to make up her mind whether she liked it or not; but when a crisis came in my profession that involved our whole future, and making many sacrifices for her, it did not take her five seconds to decide to make the bold plunge into the unknown.

"I have seen her burst into tears and weep for an hour when a dress came home that didn't fit, and I have seen her meet a great sorrow dry-eyed and with a smile on her lips.

"She is a frail little woman, always more than half ill, who has to be guarded against fatigue, yet in times of sickness I have known her to be the prop and stay of the family, and able to endure more than any husky trained nurse."

Head Waitress Discusses the Harem Skirt

By HANK.

"CAN you give me an omelette a la Harem?" asked the Steady Customer of the Head Waitress in the Cafe des Enfants as he finished studying the bill of fare.

"Quit your kidding," replied the Head Waitress, "and for the love of Mike cut the Harem thing out of your conversation. I'm sick of it. Every guy who comes around here tries to be funny by asking me if Mrs. Enfants is going to have her waitresses wear Harem skirts so that they can move around quicker. All of which is about as funny as a crutch, as the man with the wooden leg said."

"You wrong me," said the Steady Customer, "when I asked for an omelette a la Harem I meant not to be frivolous. I was in a real restaurant the other day and they had pork chops a la Harem. So why not an omelette?"

"Pork chops a la Harem!" echoed the Head Waitress. "What could they be?"

With Paper Pantalettes

"That's what I wondered," replied the Steady Customer. "So I ordered some. Well, instead of something new they brought the chops in with those regular paper pantalettes with frills on the bottom. They had been slipped over the end of the pork chop bones and served just the same way as I've been getting them for years."

"We don't hand you out any of that junk stuff here," said the Head Waitress. "When you get pork chops they're all chop and no paper. When they hand you those new-fangled things, in those swell joints, they make you pay for them. I'll bet they soaked you four bits for them chops?"

"True to the penny," admitted the Steady Customer.

"I thought so," said the Head Waitress, "and you could have come here and had the same thing, without paper pants, for a quarter. What's the good of them paper things? You can't eat them?"

"No," said the Steady Customer, "and they look just as incongruous on a pork chop as harems do on a female."

"I don't know what that 'incon' thing means," answered the Head Waitress, "but I know them harem skirts look like a nightmare."

"You must admit that they're more comfortable than a regular skirt," suggested the Steady Customer.

"I don't admit nothing," replied the Head Waitress. "And as for that, how did you know they're more comfortable. Some of you men talk like a graduate from the College of Ladies' Maids."

They Did Look Stunning

"I was looking at them in a store window the other day," the Steady Customer continued, "and some of them certainly did look stunning. They were draped on very pretty wax models. One model was a stunning blonde, and looked something like you."

"I look like a model, hey?" exclaimed the Head Waitress. "That's a fine insult, that is."

"Insult!" repeated the Steady Customer, in surprise. "Why an insult?"

"Evidently you don't know your dictionary," replied the Head Waitress, scornfully. "When you get home, look up the definition of the word 'model.' It says a model is an imitation of the real thing. I guess it's up to you to apologize."

And the Steady Customer did.

A New Variety

A prominent politician in the Middle West gave a banquet to a score or so of his neighbors, and, as he lived in a "dry" State and wanted some way to serve wine at the dinner, he had some trouble figuring out a scheme, but when the watermelon was brought on it was found it had been plugged and filled with champagne—"and, do you know," said one of the guests, "I saw every farmer there slipping some watermelon seeds into his pocket."

A Thrilling Story of the Invasion of This Country by a Hostile Sky Fleet

THE WAR IN THE AIR

The Battle of the Races for Supremacy. By H. G. Wells. Copyright by the Macmillan Company

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments.

Bert Smallways, a typical English Cokney lad, is in partnership with his friend Grubb in the bicycle business. He reads of the great man Butteridge, who has perfected the greatest airship in history.

Butteridge is willing to sell his secrets for an enormous sum—preferably to England, but it is understood that other nations, Germany amoung them, have made offers to him.

Bert Smallways and his friend Grubb desert the bicycle business and go in for theatricals. They determine to play the beaches.

While singing by the sea they and the crowd surround and rescue a balloon containing none other than Butteridge and a woman. Bert, while aiding in the rescue, is carried away in the balloon. Rummaging about in the basket for food, he finds Butteridge's heavy clothes and dons them. This leads him to discover the inventor's letters, blue prints, photos and plans—the secret of the great air inventor. He finds that Germany is expecting a visit from Butteridge.

Bert is carried 10,000 feet in the air, and finally comes low over the ground, near a great encampment, where soldiers shoot and bring down the balloon. He finds he is a captive in the great aeronautic war park of the German nation at Franconia.

He learns that Germany is ready for war with the United States and is preparing to send an air fleet to destroy New York. The German airships are from 300 to 2,000 feet long, carry as high as several hundred tons, and can travel ninety miles an hour.

The Germans are preparing a world surprise. Their war leader is Prince Karl Albert, known as the Prince of Blood and Iron.

A TALL, birdlike young man, with a small head, a long nose and very pale hair, with his hands full of things like shaving strops, boot trees, hair brushes and toilet tidies, was saying things about Gott and thunder and Dummer Booteraidge as Bert entered.

He was apparently an evicted occupant. Then he vanished and Bert was lying back on a couch in a corner, with a pillow under his head and the door of the cabin shut upon him.

He was alone. Everybody had hurried out again astonishingly.

"Gollys!" said Bert. "What next?"

He stared about him at the room.

'Butteridge! Shall I try to keep it up, or shan't I?"

The room he was in puzzled him.

"'Tisn't a prison and 'tisn't an ortis?" Then the old trouble came uppermost. "I wish to 'eaven I 'adn't these silly sandals on!" he cried querulously to the universe. "They give the whole blessed show away."

His door was flung open, and a compact young man in uniform appeared, carrying Mr. Butteridge's portfolio, rucksack and shaving glass.

"I say," he said in faultless English as he entered. He had a beaming face and a sort of pinkish blond hair. "Fancy you being Butteridge!"

He slapped Bert's meager luggage down.

"We'd have started,' he said, "in an other half hour. You didn't give yourself much time."

The Guest of the Prince

He surveyed Bert curiously. His gaze rested for a fraction of a moment on the sandals. "You ought to have come on your flying machine, Mr. Butteridge."

He didn't wait for an answer. "The Prince says I've got to look after you. Naturally he can't see you now, but he thinks your coming providential. Last grace of heaven. Like a sign. Hello!"

He stood still and listened.

Outside there was a going to and fro of feet, a sound of distant bugles suddenly taken up and echoed close at hand; men called out in loud tones short, sharp, seemingly vital things and were answered distantly.

A bell jangled and feet went down the corridor.

Then came a stillness more distracting than sound and then a great gurgling and rushing and splashing of water.

The young man's eyebrows lifted. He hesitated and dashed out of the room. Presently came a stupendous bang to vary the noises without, then a distant cheering. The young man reappeared.

"They're running the water out of the balloonette already."

"What water?" asked Bert.

"The water that anchored us. Artful dodge, eh?"

Bert tried to take it in.

"Of course," said the compact young man. "You don't understand."

A gentle quivering crept upon Bert's senses. "That's the engine," said the compact young man approvingly. "Now we shan't be long."

Another long listening interval.

The cabin swayed. "By Jove, we're starting already!" he cried. "We're starting!"

"Starting!" cried Bert, sitting up, "Where?"

But the young man was out of the room again. There were noises of German in the passage and other nerve-shaking sounds.

The swaying increased. The young man reappeared. "We're off, right enough."

"I say," said Bert. "Where are we starting? I wish you'd explain. What's this place? I don't understand."

"What!" cried the young man. "You don't understand?"

"No. I'm all dazed like from that crack on the nob I got. Where are we? Where are we starting?"

"Don't you know where you are—what this is?"

"Not a bit of it. What's all this swaying and the row?"

"What a lark," cried the young man. "I say what a thundering lark! Don't you know? We're off to America, and you haven't realized: You've just caught us by a neck. You're on the blessed old flagship with the prince. You won't miss anything. Whatever's on, you bet the Vaterland will be there."

"Us off to America!"

"Ra-ther!"

"In an airship?"

"What do you think?"

"Me! Going to America on an air-ship! After that balloon! 'Ere! I say, I don't want to go! I want to walk about on my legs. Let me get out! I didn't understand."

He made a dive for the door.

The young man arrested Bert with a gesture, took hold of a strap, lifted up a panel in the padded wall, and a window appeared. "Look!" he said. Side by side they looked out.

"Gaw!" said Bert. "We're going up!"

"We are!" said the young man cheerfully. "Fast!"

They were rising in the air smoothly and quietly and moving slowly to the throb of the engine athwart the aeronautic park.

Down below it stretched dimly geometrical in the darkness, picked out at regular intervals by glowworm spangles of light. One black gap in the long line of gray, round backed airships marked the position from which the Vaterland had come.

Beside it a second monster now rose softly, released from its bonds and cables, into the air. Then, taking a beautifully exact distance, a third ascended, and then a fourth.

"Too late," Mr. Butteridge!" the young man remarked. "We're off! I dare say it is a bit of a shock to you, but there you are! The prince said you'd have to come."

"Look 'ere," said Bert. "I really am dazed. What's this thing? Where are we going?"

"This, Mr. Butteridge," said the young man, taking pains to be explicit "is an airship. It's the flagship of Prince Karl Albert. This is the German air fleet, and it is going over to America to give that spirited people 'what for.' The only thing we were at all uneasy about was your invention. And here you are!"

"But—you a German?" asked Bert.

"Lieutenant Kurt—Luft-lieutenant Kurt, at your service."

'But you speak English."

"Mother was English—went to school in England; afterward Rhodes scholar. German none the less for that. Detailed for the present, Mr. Butteridge, to look after you. You're shaken by your fall. It's all right, really. They're going to buy your machine and everything. You sit down and take it quite calmly. You'll soon get the hang of the position."

Bert sat down on the locker, collecting his mind, and the young man talked to him about the airship.

He was really a very tactful young man, indeed, in a natural sort of way. "Dare say all this is new to you," he said, "not your sort of machine. These cabins aren't half bad."

He got up and walked around the little apartment, showing its points.

"Here is the bed," he said, whipping down a couch from the wall and throwing it back again with a click. "Here are toilet things," and he opened a neatly arranged cupboard. "Not much washing. No water we've got; no water at all except for drinking. No baths or anything until we get to America and land. Rub over with loofah. One pint of hot for shaving; that's all.

"In the locker below you are rugs and blankets. You will need them presently. They say it gets cold. I don't know. Never been up before, except a little work with gliders, which is mostly going down. Three-quarters of the chaps in the fleet haven't. Here's a folding chair and table behind the door. Compact, eh?"

He took the chair and balanced it on his little finger. "Pretty light, eh? Aluminum and magnesium alloy and a vacuum inside. All these cushions stuffed with hydrogen. Foxy! The whole ship's like that. And not a man or two others over eleven stone. Could not sweat the prince you know. We'll go all over the thing to-morrow. I'm frightfully keen on it."

He beamed on Bert. "You do look young," he remarked. "I always thought you'd be an old man with a beard—a sort of philosopher. I don't know why one should expect clever people always to be old. I do."

That Stops Dandruff.

Bay Rum ....6 oz.
Lavona de Composee.......2 oz.
Menthol Crystals ....½ dr.

These are all staple, standard and inexpensive pharmaceutical products that you can buy from any good druggist. You can mix them yourself at home or the druggist will do it for you. Allow to stand one-half hour before using. Apply night and morning, rubbing briskly into the scalp with finger tips or a medium stiff brush. The one 8 oz. bottle should, in most cases, be sufficient to completely clear the head of dandruff and kill the germ, thereby preventing its return. This treatment is also excellent for making the hair grow and to keep the hair from falling out, and although not a stain or dye, will restore natural color to gray, streaked or faded hair in from 15 to 30 days simply by its action on the hair roots. Be careful not to apply where hair is not desired.

Gray Hair
Easy to Restore Natural Color of Your Hair by Simple Method.

Science has just been finding out some of the most amazing things about the hair—discoveries that overturn many old ideas.

For instance, with a newly discovered product which is absolutely harmless, the natural color is restored by a simple treatment that can be applied by any one in a short time. This scientific treatment is embodied in the Queen Gray Hair Restorer, a liquid preparation that makes any desired shade from the one package, leaving the hair soft and fluffy, and making a lasting color that is not sticky and does not rub off.

The Queen Gray Hair Restorer is instantaneous in its effect and requires but one application to restore the natural color of your hair. It is in two sizes, 50c. and $1.00, and can be obtained from Houghton & Dutton or Riker-Jaynes stores, or in the toilet department of the leading drug and department stores throughout the country.

The best hair dressers use it and sell it to their patrons.

FOR THE THIN AND SCRAWNY
Samose Will Make You Plump and Rosy, Says Houghton & Dutton Co.

If you are getting thin, you are sick, although you may not know it. If you are losing weight steadily, there is something wrong that needs looking after. If you have always been thin it doesn't follow that you are sick, but you may not be healthy. You cannot be strong if you are thin.

Try then to be healthy and plump; it is not difficult if you know how.

The only way to increase the weight and gain health and flesh is by using Samose, the standard flesh-forming food and tissue builder. It mingles with the food you eat and is assimilated so that all the flesh-forming and tissue-building elements of the food are retained in the system. This explains the great value of Samose.

Weigh yourself before you begin using Samose. It will not cost you a cent unless it increases your weight and restores your health.

Houghton & Dutton Co. sells every package on a genuine guarantee to refund the money if it does not do all that is claimed for it.

MISS BARRYMORE CHARMS PLAYGOERS IN A DOUBLE BILL

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

Another agreeable, happy evening may be charged to Barrie. It was an evening full of Barrie at his best, with Ethel Barrymore guiding two of his comedies straight into the hearts of a house full of contented people at the Hollis Street Theatre.

Miss Barrymore left her handsome husband and the new baby—which isn't new any more—at home while she made signs at the property man in "Alice Sit-By-The-Fire" that were suspiciously natural for the stage. The audience understood and enjoyed it. At the same time it was apparent that Miss Barrymore's return to the stage brought its own reward in the form of splendid feminine maturity that made her role in "Alice Sit-By-The-Fire" more real than it appeared a few years ago, when the local engagement of the piece was cut short by the actress' sudden illness.

Miss Barrymore's Great Work.

Even now it puts a severe test upon the imagination to think of Miss Barrymore as a nice matron of forty, with grown-up children, but she managed things exceedingly well in the delightful Barrie comedy that poses fun at the sentimental weaknesses of both youth and middle life.

To believe Barrie—as you read between the lines—we are all a bit heavy with romance that needs more or less help over rough places. Doubtless he is right, for it was made plain in "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire" that even a mother may be misunderstood by her own children in matters of the heart.

Miss Barrymore was a perfect mother every minute of the play—not the kind we sob over in the sentimental drama of the hour, but the kind we laugh with and love. Nothing prettier has ever graced the stage than the Alice Grey, who so deliciously permitted herself to be saved by her own sixteen-year-old daughter. The Barrie humor of the situation and Miss Barrymore's acting made the scene an exhilarating Spring tonic.

Assisting Miss Barrymore were Charles Dalton, Louise Drew and Frank Goldsmith.

To swell the evening into a real Barrie celebration Miss Barrymore followed her three-act piece with thirty-five minutes of "The Twelve Pound Look." It was a delicious rap at misapplied success, as practiced by those leading citizens who make the worst instead of the best of their good fortune. Miss Barrymore and Mr. Dalton had the stage very much to themselves, during which grains of wisdom in the shape of crisp dialogue were given to the audience.

Star as a Typewriter.

As a simple typewriter girl who found happiness in work rather than in the luxury of wasted and vulgar wealth—which she had abruptly forsaken for the milder form of living—Miss Barrymore was especially appealing. She preached a sermon on the folly of making one's self a slave to commercial success at the sacrifice of the finer instincts that should govern one's conduct. It was a lively little sermon, with laughs tucked carefully into the corners.

Mr. Dalton, whose example of success was pompously silly, was nevertheless, extremely amusing, and Mrs. Sam Sothern made the most of her opportunities as a victim of man's vanity.

"The Twelve Pound Look" was one of the best things of the season. It was almost too real to belong to the stage.

Keith's.

An attractive and varied bill is presented at Keith's Theatre this week. The large audiences that crowded the playhouse yesterday went away much pleased.

The feature of the program is a combination of pantomime, melodrama and tragedy, musically and artistically welded together under the title, "The Darling of Paris." The "Darling" in question is played by Mlle. Mina Minar.

The children were much delighted with the clever antics of the performers in Louise Stickney's pony and dog circus. A side-splitting farce, "The New Coachman," was ably presented by Louis A. Simon & Co. Oscar Loraine, with his delicate violin selections, appealed to all who are fond of good music.

Others on the bill were Dixon and Dixon, calling themselves comedians, and living up to the name; Anna and Effie Conley, who give some highly amusing "story songs," and finally the ever popular Kaufman troupe of cyclists.

Globe Theatre.

St. Elmo brought alternate tears and laughter from the enthusiastic audience at the Globe Theatre last night. This play was the most popular of all those presented at the theatre last year, and a house full of old friends gathered to welcome its revival. The sentiment and the romance of the plot thrill the audience to-day as they have for thirty years.

Martin Alsop and Beatrice Worth are St. Elmo and Edna Earl. As St. Elmo, Mr. Alsop won as much admiration as he could really expect, and it was a real sight of relief that finally greeted his regeneration which came about, by the way, through the prayerful exhortations of Edna. Miss Worth as the mistreated Edna. Miss Worth as the mistreated sympathy. Then there is the adventuress, Miss Mabel Reed, and she did so well that every one felt pretty well toward her, in an "I told you so" fashion, after virtue, and Edna, had triumphed. The other characters are well presented.

Grand Opera House.

"Billy the Kid" returned to the Grand Opera House last night, and by the reception the four-act Western melodrama received one would judge that the play had lost none of its former popularity with the theatre patrons of this city.

There are many exciting scenes throughout the entire four acts, and the audience is also provided with a judicious sprinkling of comedy between the exciting scenes.

The role of Billy is played by Frank Dickinson, who is well known in Boston as a most capable romantic actor. Frank Hoadley as Con Hanley, the Irishman, the stanch friend of Billy, made the most of the comic possibilities of the part. Joe Fry as Mose More made a hit with his solos and his dancing. The role of Nellie Bradley was played to perfection by Helen Wilson, while Loftus Husband and the other members of the company played their roles in superb manner.

Plays That Remain

The run of "The End of the Bridge" at the Castle Square Theatre remains unchecked and the sixth week of that interesting play began yesterday.

"The Commuters" persists in drawing capacity audiences to the Park Theatre, where a new week was begun last evening.

Frank Daniels and "The Girl in the Train" are more than holding their own at the Colonial Theatre. Mr. Daniels has never been funnier.

Robert Hilliard began his second week at the Boston Theatre last evening in "A Fool There Was." Mr. Hilliard has many opportunities for fine acting.

"Jumping Jupiter" began a new week at the Tremont Theatre last evening. Richard Carle is the merry cut-up of the piece.

Orpheum Theatre

"The Watermelon Trust" put over a few new ideas in jolly entertainment at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday. The high quality of this act made it one of the real hits of the bill. There were a half dozen other engaging features and a new list of motion pictures.

Hub Theatre

Gilbert Losee, a minstrel with a reputation, made merry at the Hub Theatre yesterday. The program was made up of other enlivening features.

Gaiety Theatre

"The Girls From Happyland," with Billy Watson to lead them, made the best of their opportunities at the Gaiety Theatre yesterday. Good comedy and pretty girls made the show one of the liveliest of the Gaiety's long list this season.

Howard Athenaeum

Abe Attell, the featherweight fighter, was the main thing at the Howard Athenaeum yesterday. With Jack Sheehan he was seen in a sketch, "Training Stunts." The crowd liked the way Attell behaved. The burlesque part of the entertainment was furnished by "The New Century Girls," among whom were many popular singers and dancers.

Theatre Comique

George Sontag, the reformed ex-convict, drew large crowds to the Theatre Comique yesterday. His lecture was particularly interesting. The daylight pictures were also a part of the programme.

Hopper at the Shubert

The Shubert Theatre will remain "dark" until next Monday, when DeWolf Hopper will move into that house with "A Matinee Idol," which has carried him to splendid success in New York. Mr. Hopper will not be seen as a grotesque comic opera here but as an up-to-the-second New Yorker.

Columbia Theatre

"The Jolly Girls," stirred merriment at the Columbia Theatre yesterday with two of the smartest burlettas of the year. They were "The Flying Man from Mexico" and "An Irish Pasha." There was also some good vaudeville.

Scenic Temple

The new program at the Scenic Temple yesterday contained much that was appropriate to the closing week of Lent. The pictures were new and interesting.

Bowdoin Square Theatre

Hilton and Bannon in "The Battle of Too Soon" headed the new bill at the Bowdoin yesterday. There were other features.

Austin & Stone's

Charles H. Jackson of Brockton, the State's heaviest citizen—weight 533 pounds—put a severe test on the platform at Austin & Stone's Museum yesterday. He proved a big drawing card.

Waldron's Casino

There was no doubt about the popularity of Al Reeves when he appeared on the stage at Waldron's Casino Theatre yesterday. Mr. Reeves headed his own "Beauty Show" and it proved almost the last work in high-class burlesque.

Majestic Theatre

"The Prince of Pilsen" will return to Boston next week, playing at the Majestic Theatre. In this production Henry W. Savage has brought to the front one of the strongest musical comedy organizations of the year. Jess Dandy, who will be seen in his old role, which he has now played more than 2,000 times.

Olcott in New Play

Chauncey Olcott's annual pilgrimage to Boston will begin at the Boston Theatre next Monday, when the Irish singer, comedian and romancer will appear in "Barry of Ballymore," a play written by Rida Johnson Young. The play is essentially romantic and has been a popular attraction wherever it has played. Mr. Olcott has a number of new songs.

Business Success Through Publicity

No. 104

Advertising a Screen House

It is strange where ideas will blossom, wither and die. Sometimes they don't die, however, but go on in spite of everything, because they turn out so valuable to the consumer.

Advertising is so far reaching in its effects that no one can tell when and where it will produce, and sometimes it succeeds in spite of every effort to handicap it.

The writer had recently called to his attention a small advertisement which appeared in a paper with small circulation, and later he met the owner of the article advertised. The man was making a screen house with tent attachment that could be set up in five minutes without screws or nails; something most desirable for people who sleep out of doors and children who play in play houses. It fact it was a practical out-door sleeping room and it had great sales possibilities.

The maker inserted last year an advertisement in a newspaper of small circulation. He had over three hundred replies and they came from as far away as British Columbia. He actually got provoked, they came in so fast, and when the writer saw him this business man pulled from his desk a batch of a dozen or more letters and said: "Why, I haven't had time to answer these yet."

The advertising man gasped. "Well, what under the sun did you advertise for?"

"Well," said he, "I did it just as a flier."

What do you think of a business man of that kind? And this year he repeated this advertisement and the letters are still coming in.

Now suppose he had used business methods and promptness in the answering of his replies to the advertisements and used a paper of large circulation.

He has the nucleus of a national business in that little screen house of his. He could sell his product from the Gulf to Winnipeg, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, through the power of national advertising, but he has not awakened to the need of persistent advertising and the need of carefully following up his replies.

All of which goes to show the far-reaching effect of newspaper advertising, and how some men run a business that might be national and very profitable.

The Boston American, with its circulation of almost 400,000, is one of the greatest advertising forces in New England. It can take your story into the best buying centres of New England and sell your goods wherever they can be used.

Address, for particulars how it can help you, Trade Aid Department, Boston American.

HOW TO AVOID AUTO-SKIDDING

By J. C. KERRISON.

With the advent of wet and slushy weather, city pavements assume the most favorable conditions for that bugbear of all motorists—side-slip or skidding. When your car starts to skid there are two things to remember to do—decrease your speed, but do not apply the brakes—turn the car in the direction you are skidding. Always keep a little driving power on the rear wheels. A car travels in the line of least resistance—the fact that a car side-slips shows that there is more resistance to a forward than a side-wise movement, which usually occurs when rounding corners. It is easy to see that by applying the brakes and locking the rear wheels the only motion possible is a side-wise motion, while a slight drive on the wheels tends to overcome this, or better still, use chains.

A plan for the rebuilding of the roads in Central Park, New York, at an estimated cost of $450,000, has been proposed by the commissioner in charge of Gotham's big play-ground. He declares the roads, as at present constructed, will not withstand automobile traffic, and are continually in need of repairs.

A computation in Motor Age sets forth that "If the total number of gasoline cars in the country is 250,000, for instance, and average 5,199½ miles during the season, getting twelve and one-half miles of service to the gallon, the amount consumed is 103,985,000 gallons. At an average of fifteen cents a gallon, the cost is $15,597,750."

The Abbott-Detroit Retail Sales Company has been organized, and taken over the retail affairs of the Abbott-Detroit car. Burley Crockett and W. J. Taylor, who are at the head of the new company, have both had many years experience in the local motor world and are known as hustlers from the word go.

Their temporary headquarters have been established on Harcourt street, where they will remain pending the securing of more commodious quarters. The fact that these two men have taken hold of the Abbott-Detroit means its continual success in these fields.

A man with a penchant for freak calculations has compounded some interesting figures based upon an order for 50,000 pneumatic tires, recently placed with the United States Tire Company by the United States Motor Company. The average diameter of the wheels upon which the casings are to be fitted was found to be thirty-four inches. The length of a thirty-four-inch shoe when stretched over a distance of ground is about nine feet—eight feet ten and four-fifths inches to be exact.

Taking the 50,000 tires and computing their combined length on a basis of miles, it will be seen that if they were cut and laid end to end, they would form a continuous track of rubber eighty-five miles long. This would fail only a few miles short of covering the distance between New York and Philadelphia.

The weight of this bulky consignment also is interesting. Figuring that each thirty-four inch tire weighs approximately twenty pounds, it will be seen that the manufacture of these tires involves 1,000,000 pounds, or 500 tons of valuable material.

JORDAN HALL ACTORS SUFFER BY THIEVES

During a performance in Jordan Hill, Back Bay, last night, a gang of thieves gained entrance to the dressing rooms and made away with property. The property reported stolen and the owners follow: Sidney Foesie, No. 37 Aldie street, a gray overcoat; Warren P. Holden, No. 119 Massachusetts avenue, a brown handbag; Clement P. Hayes, a handbag containing a vest, shirt, pair of gloves and $1.30, and Arthur J. Olsen, No. 10 Mount Auburn street, Cambridge, a bag containing a watch, coat, vest, shirt and $8.60.

THIEVES GET RINGS, FURS AND CLOTHES

Victor Brusendorff of No. 20 Paisley Park, Dorchester, who conducts a cafe at No. 118 Eliot street, reported to the police early to-day that his home was broken into some time between 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon and 12:30 a. m. to-day. Among the various articles stolen were two silver-mounted hair brushes, a pair of gold opera glasses, an opal ring, an emerald ring, a silver manicure set, a sealskin coat and a man's suit. The articles were valued at several hundred dollars.

ARCHBISHOP AIDS RED CROSS FUND

Philip Stockton, of the Old Colony Trust Company, treasurer of the Boston Endowment Committee of the American Red Cross, acknowledges among recent contributions $100 from Archbishop William H. O'Connell. Miss Mary E. Eaton gives a similar amount, and Mrs. William C. Endicott, $50. The Boston fund now amounts to $24,537.

GUILD SEES TAFT AND THANKS HIM

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Former Governor Curtis Guild of Massachusetts called upon the President and thanked him for his efforts in passing the Appalachian and White Mountain forest reserve bill in the last Congress. The Governor is in Washington attending a quarterly meeting of the American Forestry Association.

NAVY HAS NEW SHELL.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 11.—The Navy crew have launched an English-built racing shell which arrived from across the Atlantic yesterday. The shell is of cedar and similar to that purchased last season by Harvard.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

MO. PACIFIC IS STILL ACTIVE

NEW YORK, April 11.—Missouri Pacific was the single exception to dull and featureless trading in the stock market to-day. An initial advance of ⅛ was shown in this stock which moved fractionally until it rose ⅝.

Despite this gain, sentiment among traders remained bearish, the opinion prevailing that the recent steady selling augured some future development of importance both to the road in question and to Wall Street interests.

St. Paul, which had moved up in London, opened practically unchanged here. Lehigh Valley opened ⅛ up. The curb opened quiet with prices unchanged.

Although trading in Americans on the London market was narrow, the shares made slight advances.

The cotton market opened steady, with prices from four points lower to nine points higher. Futures were steady, and spot firm in the Liverpool market. May 14.63, July 14.59, August 14.16, September 13.37, October 12.92, December 12.83, January 12.78.

FIRE TRAPS 300 GIRLS IN FACTORY

HOBOKEN, N. J., April 11.—Three hundred girls were trapped by fire to-day in the four story paper box factory of Owens & Traeger on Madison street. Flames blocked the single fire escape and the girls became panic stricken but were led by one of their number to an enclosed stairway and all escaped safely. They fought their way to the stairway through stifling clouds of smoke and on the way there was a stampede in which many were knocked down and badly bruised. One girl was overcome and was rescued by firemen.

GRAND OPERA COST IS GOING HIGHER

NEW YORK, April 11.—The price of grand opera is being boosted. The board of directors of the Metropolitan Opera House to-day announced that after Saturday night the price of seats in the orchestra and orchestra circle will be increased from $5 to $6 each. The advance will affect subscribers as well as single seat purchasers. This is the first step, it is believed, in a general price advance in grand opera throughout the United States, on account of the "high cost of production."

POLICE FIND BODY IN VACANT TENEMENT

The body of a man, aged forty, was found early to-day in an unoccupied apartment house at the corner of Pine and Washington streets. Policeman Cronin of the Lagrange street station saw a man, evidently a tramp, entering the place and made an investigation. Medical Examiner Leary ordered the body removed to the City Hospital morgue for examination. He said the man probably died from natural causes.

GILMAN GUEST OF G. A. R. IN BALTIMORE

BALTIMORE, April 11.—When G. A. R. Commander-in-Chief John E. Gilman arrived from Boston yesterday he was given a hearty old soldier's welcome. He was escorted to Odd Fellows Temple, where he was given a rousing greeting by the Thirty-Fifth Annual Encampment of Maryland. He discussed the new pension bill which, he said, the committee was now pushing vigorously and expected to have passed at the special session.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

Now that no decisions can be expected in the trust cases until next Monday every one expects the governors of the Stock Exchange to grant the petition for holidays Friday and Saturday.

As an indication of the gradual improvement of general business, it is noted that the sales of gold bars at the New York Assay Office were greater last month than they have been in any March since the panic of 1907.

There returned yesterday from extensive travels the heads of two of the most important business establishments in the country—Frank A. Vanderlip of the National City Bank, from a 13,000-mile tour of the United States, and George H. McFadden, head of America's greatest cotton exporting house, from a tour of Europe. Both report conditions good, with every prospect of recovering.

In England the spinning industry is booming, and in the United States the crop outlook is unusually good. These two men have arrived at practically the same conclusion regarding American business as a result of independent investigations in exactly opposite directions.

The Gould issues are being avoided by conservative houses, although there is considerable buying quietly of the Wabash-Pittsburg Terminal first mortgage bonds because of their intrinsic merit. Missouri Pacific, however, is still an outcast because it seems that every first-class man to whom the presidency has been offered has refused it under the conditions imposed. The operating men, as well as the financial community, seem to demand a complete elimination of the Goulds.

The Steel Corporation report is not discouraging because the trust plants have been operated at a greater capacity than during February. Orders taken during March were much greater than the statement indicates. Steel men, admitted that trade is quieting down and the outlook for April is not so good as it was two weeks ago. There is even some talk again of cutting prices, but the trust people deny that anything of the kind is contemplated.

The Porcupine Securities Company of New York has underwritten a block of 0,000 shares of Ontario Gold Wonder mining stock, located in the Porcupine district, and offering it for subscription at 20 cents per share. The company owns five gold mining claims adjacent to the Swashka. Assays give from $24.72 to $30.90 gold per ton. The main line of the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railroad runs through the property. The company intends to install a stamp mill to handle a larger quantity of ore than its present equipment does.

Circumstantial reports persist that the Brazilian government proposes to back a syndicate to force the price of rubber higher. It is possible that the Supreme Court of the United States has been embarrassed in the Oil and Tobacco cases by the ease with which Americans can defy the Sherman anti-trust law by making some foreigners parties to a conspiracy in restraint of trade. The Brazilian government succeeded in taking millions of dollars from American citizens through its conspiracy with coffee merchants. A repetition of the operation in rubber would make it doubtful if it is worth while for the Supreme Court to pass on the Sherman law at all.

There is a theory among persons in close touch with the situation that if Missouri Pacific could break to about 25 the Goulds would be more amenable to reason in this matter. Those unfortunates who bought Missouri Pacific on information received midst flowers and music on a momentous occasion in the recent past are beginning to wonder just what part they are supposed to be playing in the ceremony.

Legislatures have introduced nearly 500 bills since January 1 for the regulation of railroads in the various States, according to an official report made by the Committee on Relation of Railway Operation to Legislature. They are divided among the States as follows: Alabama, 3; Arkansas, 14; California, 16; Colorado, 10; Connecticut, 7; Delaware, 5; Idaho, 12; Illinois, 13; Indiana, 34; Iowa, 10; Kansas, 23; Massachusetts, 13; Minnesota, 7; Missouri, 64; Montana, 13; Nebraska, 22; Nevada, 10; New Hampshire, 8; New Jersey, 7; New York, 12; North Carolina, 5; North Dakota, 17; Ohio, 11; Oklahoma, 11; Oregon, 11; Pennsylvania, 3; Rhode Island, 2; South Carolina, 24; South Dakota, 11; Texas, 9; Utah, 1; Vermont, 10; Washington, 16; West Virginia, 12; Wisconsin, 29, and Wyoming, 5.

OLD TEXAS WILL BE BOMBARDED AGAIN

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The San Marcos, known in the days of her prime as the battleship Texas, will be the target for another ordnance test on April 19, which probably will consign her to the junk heap. The monitor Tallahassee will bombard the old ship with twelve-inch guns from varying ranges to obtain technical data. The experiment will be held in Chesapeake Bay. All the valuable material, including her guns, will be removed from the old vessel before the second experiment is held.

BATH BANK READY TO PAY BACK ONE-THIRD

BATH, Me., April 11.—The receivers of the People's Safe Deposit and Savings Bank announce that they expect to apply to the court for permission to pay a dividend of 33 1-3 per cent. to depositors in May. They also announce the acceptance of very satisfactory bids from Boston brokers and Maine savings banks for $173,000 of the bonds, offered for the first sale. Bids will be asked later for other securities.

COAL WAGON HOLDS UP CAR SERVICE

Passengers on a long line of electric cars on Summer street extending from Washington street to the South Station fumed and fretted for fifteen minutes during a blockade this forenoon. An Ashmont and Milton North bound car and a Metropolitan Coal Company wagon disputed the right of way at the corner of Summer and Washington streets. After a quarter of an hour's pulling and hauling the two vehicles were separated and and traffic was resumed.

B. F. Hamilton Dead.

BIDDEFORD, Me., April 11.—State Senator Benjamin F. Hamilton died at 3:30 a. m. to-day. He was one of the most prominent lawyers in the State and held many offices.

Money to Loan.

SEVEN REASONS

Why you should borrow from us: 1—You need no security, just your plain note; 2—You do not need an indorser; 3—We will forfeit $100 to a charitable institution if we notify your employer or friends of your intention to borrow from us; 4—You can get your loan at once; 5—You can pay it back in small payments; 6—You don't ride in an elevator where you are liable to meet your employer or friends; 7—Last, but not least, we only charge you 1 per cent. interest on each $1 you borrow from us, up to $100, with a written agreement not to charge you said interest if you are dissatisfied. Come and talk it over in our private office. WAGE EARNERS' LOAN ASS'N, 10 State st.

PRIVATE LOANS

TO salaried employes without security or indorser at cheaper rates and easier terms than heretofore offered in Boston.

If you have a loan elsewhere, bring in your receipts and we will show you how much you can save by borrowing from us. Having loans elsewhere is no bar to you getting loans here.

Credit once established with us is as good as a bank account in time of need.

A Power from Afar Lights Your Minds—

As the Power from Distant Niagara Lights Your Streets.

In the city of Syracuse the power of Niagara lights the streets, moves the street cars and the machinery in the factories. Mr. H. D. Burrill, editor of the Syracuse Journal, asked this newspaper to prepare an editorial that would be interesting to Syracuse readers. The editorial which follows was sent to Mr. Burrill's Syracuse Journal and is reproduced from that newspaper's columns.

In Syracuse even the children have often thought, in awe and wondering admiration, of the work done by the distant, invisible, unheard cataract of Niagara.

The water of the great lakes, rushing to the sea, is harnessed at the Fall—and the power taken from the rushing torrent lights the streets, moves the citizens to and from their homes, gives energy to the factories—spreads over thousands of square miles of territory more power than could be furnished by ten times as many horses as such a territory could feed.

The stranger in Syracuse is especially impressed by the achievements of that distant workman, Niagara; by the thought of that thin wire, crossing the fields and forest for a hundred and fifty miles, to supply, in quantities unlimited, the strange electric power, man's universal servant. How much it means to humanity, to the real civilization of the future, to which we all look forward, that man, inheritor and caretaker of this planet, is to find in Nature's forces the strength that will free him from physical bondage and let him devote his glorious future to activity of the intellect alone.

"And ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." Free indeed, and it is knowledge of SCIENTIFIC truth that gives to man the FIRST freedom, that which will lead eventually to spiritual truth and freedom of the mind.

The greatest of the Greeks declared that without slavery civilization could not exist, and man's intellect could not mature. He was right. If the citizens of Athens had not had their slaves to do manual labor, while others did the thinking, there would never have existed the Greece or the Greeks that we know.

Civilization must have slaves—slaves that will labor while others think and live the life of the mind. But the intellect of man—left free to work by the labor of slaves—has freed the slaves by thought.

The gigantic slaves of the future will be the great cataracts, the forces of the winds and of the tides and eventually the harnessed power of the sun.

Not man, in galleys or harnessed to great blocks of stone, will transport commerce or build pyramids in future centuries—but the unfeeling, untiring forces of Nature will do the hard work, and humanity, having made Nature's power its slave, will be entirely free—and the life of thought and comfort reserved hitherto to the few will be the inheritance of all.

That is one thought aroused by the sight of those great feeding wires that lead into Syracuse from the roaring Falls of Niagara.

Another thought, one that should be impressed upon the minds of children and of all young people is this:

As our streets are lighted from afar, so are our minds lighted from afar.

It is wonderful that electric power should be brought by a frail wire hundreds of miles from the power's source. But how much more wonderful that intellectual power should be brought to us in books down through centuries from the distant ages of the past.

Power from Niagara is wonderful.

Power from the brain of Archimedes, from the imagination of Shakespeare, from the example of Giordano Bruno, from the patient persistency of Arkwright—such is the power that lights our minds, bringing knowledge, inspiration and mental light from those that died in the distant past.

How much more wonderful is that, than Niagara's power transmitted? The rushing waters far off light our cities — the rushing thought of distant ages lights our minds.

From the same incoming wire men get heat, light, power, telephone and telegraphic communication—physical energy in all its manifestations. From the simple alphabet of twenty-six letters, infinitely combined, men get thought, knowledge and inspiration in every form, from every age.

And the transmission of distant knowledge is infinitely more wonderful than that of distant power.

To Lower the Price of a Pail of Coal

An important decision has been handed down by the United States Supreme Court. It has restored the vigor of the "commodity" clause in the Hepburn Rate bill—the clause which forbids coal-carrying railroads from owning coal mines.

The ultimate effect of this decision should be the breaking up of the anthracite coal monopoly.

It will not be denied that the original and costly legal effort to divorce the coal roads from the coal mines was made by Mr. Hearst—as a private citizen, spending his time and money to protect the public by pumping life into the clumsy and half-hearted Sherman and Hepburn acts. This newspaper has, therefore, a special cause for satisfaction in the decision just rendered.

The announcement of the decision caused a Wall Street reaction in the share list of anthracite "rails," because it promises to restrict the railroads to their proper business as common carriers and to dissolve the system whereby they have been able to conceal their enormous and extortionate coal freight charges.

Followed up, as it will be, by due legal processes, this victory should reduce the cost of every pail of coal that goes into a tenement house stove.

It will thus be added to the triumph of eighty-cent gas and the long list of homely and practical advantages won for the people by Mr. Hearst and the AMERICAN.

Waking Up the People

Editor Norman Hapgood of Collier's Shows How the American Works for the Public Good

Reprinted from late edition of yesterday's AMERICAN.

Speaking before a large audience in Ford Hall, Norman Hapgood, the widely known editor of Collier's Weekly, praised the AMERICAN for its expose of the unfaithful Senators of New Hampshire, and for its work in other directions for the good of the people.

"The Social Function of the Press" was the theme of the New York editor. He declared that the great masses of people never had an effective spokesman until the popular newspaper, which has been called a yellow journal, made its appearance.

"While this kind of newspaper has faults, to be sure," said Mr. Hapgood, "it has been enormously valuable in shaking people out of the old ruts and bringing them to seriously consider the wishes and rights of the majority.

"I know of no better example right at hand to explain to you what I mean than that of Mr. Hearst's Boston AMERICAN. It is the only daily paper in New England that has had the ability and the willingness to present to the public effectively the essence of the political fight that is going on in New Hampshire.

"Both of the political parties went on record in that State for a number of popular measures—the income tax amendment, the election of United States Senators by the people and other measures that would insure a more representative government.

"Governor Bass was enthusiastically in favor of the measures and that the people wanted them was shown by the fact that he was elected because he came out for them in his campaign. The House of Representatives favored them. But the result showed that Mr. Mellen of the New Haven and Boston & Maine railroads refused to let the Senate keep their party pledges.

"The New Hampshire newspapers, with the exception of one Concord daily and some weeklies, could not help in the fight of the people, and the Boston AMERICAN was the one paper that saw the situation and exposed it so completely and so powerfully as to show that it is not merely a political difference of opinion—but instead, it is a disgraceful betrayal by the Senators of the genuine interests of the State."

Discussing the same subject just before he went to Radcliffe College to make an address, Mr. Hapgood said:

"I have been a pretty close student of Boston, and while I see Mr. Hearst's New York papers more than I do the Boston AMERICAN, I follow the AMERICAN very closely.

"I read your New Hampshire story yesterday with intense interest. I have followed the fight there, of course, and I am in a position to know that you told the truth.

"What I tried to impress on my audience at Ford Hall was that the Boston AMERICAN'S story was so strong and so graphic—that it went so into the vital part of the matter there—that it could not fail to impress the whole people of that State with the fact that they had been the victims of traitorous conduct.

"If it were not for the AMERICAN, the real facts would be known to but few people. It is a fair example of what a big, fearless newspaper can do in exposing people who have been recreant to their trusts.

"I recall that I read the whole story in the Boston AMERICAN of how Mr. Brandeis caught officials of the Boston & Maine Railroad in removing from a committee room certain coal rate figures that showed the Boston & Maine had broken the Federal laws relating to rebates.

"I recall that the AMERICAN was the only Boston paper that would publish the reports that were made by the Board of Health against certain brands of impure beer.

"It is this kind of journalism that has been a great help to the people in waking them to a sense of what is going on about them. It stands for progress and the common good."

Where Fools Rush In

By MILES OVERHOLT

"I WANT to look at your hats," I said, "the kind that are now in style—
The women's hats with the dew-dads on, the kind that makes 'em smile."
"Now, here's a pippin," replied the clerk, "a daisy, a dosy, a dear;
There are fourteen kinds of birds on it and plume right over the ear."
"Well, what is the price?" I loudly said, for I had a hundred or so,
And I wanted to show the other clerks that I was a man of "dough."

"Well, since it's you and you like the style—and I know you're a man of taste—
We'll close the deal up right away, for you have not time to waste;
The price is nothing—a bagatelle—since you have wealth in chunks,
I'll let you have this nifty lid for just ten thousand plunks!"

'Twas a palace grand where they sold those lids; 'twas Fashion's loafing place.
I should have gone to a loan shark joint, where I could keep the pace.
But we passed that lid. The next was made of lace and flowers and buds.
'Twas called the "Hobble," and made to wear with hobbledest kind of duds.
The price was, maybe, a thousand more, and my purse was much too slim;
I couldn't buy the tiny thread that hung from the ten-foot brim.
Though I tried to flee from the wrath to come and go upon the street,
The clerk with thirteen high-brow hats had cut off all retreat.
She showed me at least a million lids, and the prices made me weep.

And she talked me into a coward, for I swore that all were cheap.

Somehow I managed to reach the door. With a wild, unearthly screech
I grabbed my hat and fled the scene to get from out her reach.
And on I ran till I found a stream that was forty fathoms deep,
And I threw in that two hundred plunks to prove that I wasn't cheap.
Now I spend my cash for stocks and bonds and pork and beans and pie,
I have had enough of Fashion's pace to last me till I die.
No ladies' hats for Yours in Haste; I lack the nerve to list 'em,
When I have coin to spend in bales I'll buy a railroad system!

A Bloke's Proposal

By N. P. BABCOCK

"YER lookin' swell," he said to her;
"Come off," she said to him.
"You don't work any old transfer Upon this trolley, Jim."

"Yer t'ink I'm kiddin'; ain't yer wise
Ter when a bloke's dead straight?"
His tone commingled mild surprise
With hope of kinder fate.

"O' course if I'm a buttin' in
It's up to me to sneak;
A bloke mus' hold d' cards ter win"—
He paused for her to speak.

"You've got your nerve," remarked the girl—
His arm was round her waist.
Said he: "Now on d' level, Pearl,
Ain't I de guy wid taste?"

Could Romeo with defter touch
His secret love confess?
Or Juliet embellish much
That sweet girl's answer, "Chee?"
